EUROPEAN SITUATION REPORTED TENSE

War Question Is Again Agitating Political Chiefs

Alarming Note Struck By Diplomatic Correspondents and Next Few Weeks Are Viewed With Some Alarm In Britain

British United Press Cable. Exclusive to The Bulletin

LONDON, July 30.—Will Germany be ready for war towards the end of August or early in September, and will Hitler and his aides choose that time to press for action in Czechoslovakia and thus precipitate a European crisis? This is the question that is agitating many political leaders in Europe who are in close touch with the situation and who view the next few weeks with alarm.

Despite the fact that Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain has gone on his vacation, which he intends devoting mainly to fishing, he will not be far removed from the cares of the foreign office. Diplomatic interchanges with Germany in an attempt to reach the basis for a new Anglo-German agreement are actively proceeding, and will continue to proceed.

Mr. Chamberlain is most hopeful that nothing will occur in the Sudeten German situation which will give rise to a crisis; but there is evidence that Herr Hitler wants to explore the whole range of questions which have arisen since the German conquest of Austria and which have been created by that conquest, resulting in a widening of the breach between Germany and Great Britain, and therein lies the grave danger.

RECIPROCATES EFFORT

Prime Minister Chamberlain reciprocates this effort on the part of the German fuehrer but is proceeding with the utmost caution because he mistrusts those who are Hitler's advisers, and is suspicious as to what the ultimate German objectives will prove to be. This suspicion is also shared by France and Czechoslovakia, and in official

FREE ACTION FOR DOMINION IN WAR URGED

Rights of Nation In Time Of Strife Endorsed By C.C.F. Parley

Freedom of action for Canada in case of war, refusal to participate in any imperialistic war, and acceptance of collective security, were endorsed as principles of the foreign policy of the C.C.F. at its concluding session here Friday afternoon.

The party previously had rejected an amendment pledging Canada to fight only when actually invaded, and another calling for a national referendum before a war decision was made. Both were decisively defeated.

MACNEIL STATES POLICY

The foreign policy plank was introduced by C. G. MacNeil, Vancouver M.P.

Discussing the "immediate issues" facing Canada after lamenting "the betrayal of the League of Nations" and citing economic competition as the main cause of war, the foreign policy plank declared:

"The new international situation creates a threat of war so serious that the Canadian people must have an immediate policy which will express their intense desire for peace. Such a policy should have the following objectives and be based on the following principles:

(a) Canada must free herself from her present commitments, based upon the conception of Canada as a colony rather than as a free and self-governing nation, which must automatically involve her in a war to which another member of the Commonwealth is a party. In addition to legal ties with the Empire which have not yet been clarified, guarantees to Great Britain of naval bases and co-operation in war preparation will make active participation inevitable. While these continue,

NEW FOREST FIRES SWEEP B. C. TIMBER

VANCOUVER, July 30.—New forest blazes swelled an already heavy toll of damage in timber, railway bridges and homes in British Columbia today as weary firefighters looked skyward for rain the weather bureau predicted might come to some districts by nightfall.

At least five extensive blazes, mostly in the southern interior, were running out of control. Valuable timber, railway bridges, a shingle mill and two homes have provided their fuel so far.

Forty unemployed men were rushed from Princeton last night to Coquihalla Pass to augment firefighters battling an extensive blaze that already had wiped out three Canadian Pacific Railway branch line bridges.

A forest blaze three miles south of Revelstoke assumed serious proportions last night, and threatened a club and playground at Williamson's Lake, two miles away.

At Webster's Coroners, a few miles east of Vancouver in the rich Fraser Valley farming area, a timber blaze was out of control. It had already destroyed a shingle mill and homes of two families.

FORD GLANCES BACK OVER 75 YEARS OF LIFE

Motor Magnate Would Live It Same Way Again If He Had Chance

By ROBERT K. TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

DETROIT, July 30.—Henry Ford looked back today on 75 years of a busy life, filled with problems of administering a great industrial empire, and said he would do it the same way if given a chance to live his life over again from the time he was 21 and a "pretty fair" mechanic in a small Detroit factory.

Henry Ford

Ford celebrated his 75th birthday today, feted, by fellow-citizens of this automobile capital he helped build, but the celebrations did not detract materially from his working hours devoted to factory enlargement plans.

"Would I live my life again as I have lived it? Yes," Ford told The Canadian Press. "There is not one significant thing I would change, for even if it were not the wisest of things, I still learned much from it that I could not have learned otherwise. We all make mistakes, but there is more to be had out of our mistakes than we realize.

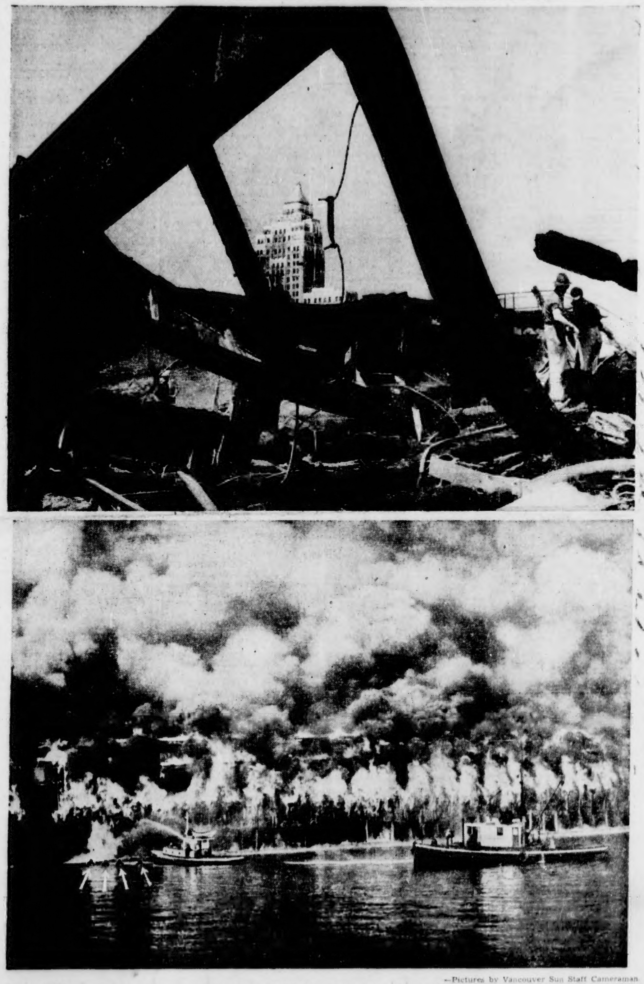
"I'm a great believer in the value of experience. Everything is experience. But experience is more than what happens to a man, it is what the man does with what happens to him. I do not know any essential thing in my course of life that I would change, except of course, to do everything a little better."

Ford denied he was an example of a man with great riches and attendant responsibilities, worries and work, who would like to escape his position if he could.

Twelfth Case

WINNIPEG, July 30—Twelfth case of infantile paralysis in Manitoba this summer was reported to the provincial health department Friday. Victim is a 30-year old man at Hilbre, 140 miles northwest of Winnipeg.

First Pictures Of Vancouver's $1,200,000 Harbor Fire



—Pictures by Vancouver Sun Staff Cameraman

Rushed to Edmonton, the above exclusive pictures show the $1,200,000 Vancouver harbor blaze which roared through Canadian Pacific Steamship company's Pier D Wednesday afternoon and left a smouldering mass of wreckage in the coast city's most disastrous waterfront fire since 1930. The top picture shows tangled steel on a part of the pier from which thousands of passengers had embarked on coastal steamships plying to Seattle, Victoria, Nanaimo and the northern coast. The Marine Building can be seen in the background.

Thousands of thrill-seeking spectators watched the scene in the bottom picture as four firemen (indicated by arrows) struggled in the water. They were forced to jump to save their lives as the flames advanced. The fire-fighters had been lowered to a guard log to play water up under the dock and were saved by the tug Charles H. Cates.

HAIL BATTERS WHEAT FIELDS NEAR CALGARY

CALGARY, July 30 — Battered wheat fields were surveyed for damage estimates in the Innisfail district, north of Calgary, today.

For half an hour last night hail crushed crops, causing extensive damage west and northwest of the town. Some farmers reported damage up to 40 per cent; others waited to make a survey before estimating their losses.

The affected area lay along the northern edge of the 70-mile long strip hit by hail 10 days ago.

Holy Land Now Bathed Crimson And in Tears

Following is the first of three dispatches by Webb Miller, veteran war and diplomatic correspondent of the United Press, explaining the causes underlying today's terrorism in the Holy Land. Miller returned early this year from a thorough investigation of the problem in Palestine which this week surged to a new crisis in which many Jews and Arabs were killed and wounded.—EDITOR.

LONDON, July 30—A Jew is stoned to death in the narrow streets of Haifa; a screaming Arab dies. An armored car bristling British machine guns speeds over the ancient road to Jerusalem.

The Holy Land is bathed in blood and tears. Terrorism approaching the intensity of civil war marks the breakdown of Great Britain's policy aimed at establishing 'a modern Jewish nation in Palestine.

Oil Slick Marks Spot Where Huge Plane Hit Water

Army Transport Ship Locates "Thick Oil Area" Directly In Line Of Clipper's Course When She Disappeared Thursday

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30.—Pan American Airways officials said today they considered the finding of an oil patch on the Guam to Manila course of the missing Hawaii clipper "significant, but not conclusive." The search will continue, the company said.

MANILA, July 30.—The United States army transport Meigs today found a large patch of oil on the surface of the Pacific Ocean today, indicating the missing Hawaii Clipper may have plunged into the sea 500 miles from Manila.

The Meigs made no mention of sighting any wreckage from the luxurious flying boat which disappeared with 15 men on a flight from Guam to Manilla Friday (Thursday night Pacific time).

Two lifeboats were put out by the transport to search the tell-tale oil slick but were recalled at nightfall.

The Meigs said the coating of heavy oil was about 1,500 feet in circumference, which experts said was "quite large" for a plane the size of the clipper.

NO OTHER SOURCE

But marine men were unable to suggest any other source for the slick, an oil coating such as a plane leaves on the surface of the water when sinking.

The lifeboats from the Meigs collected samples of oil from the surface to help determine whether it was from the flying boat.

LITTLE HOPE HELD

If the Hawaii clipper sank there, little hope was held of finding the wreckage, for the slick may lay over deep waters, ranging to a depth of 5,352 fathoms.

Pan American men here suggested the clipper might have dumped

LOW REPORTS FAST PROGRESS IN NORTH AREA

Confident McMurray Salt Mine Will Supply Alberta's Needs

Expressing the utmost faith and confidence in the future of the northern section of this province and the north in general and enthused over rapid development taking place there, Hon. Solon E. Low, provincial treasurer, on his return from an airplane trip as far as Fort Fitzgerald and Goldfields, declared that the day was not far distant when the McMurray salt mine would be supplying all Alberta's needs in this line.

The Minister was warm in his praises of the north. "Why," he said with a smile, "I spent Thursday night at Goldfields and despite the fact that there are three hotels there, they were so crowded, that I had to shake myself down in a corridor. But never mind, I had just as good a sleep as if I was in the royal suite."

Woodsworth Challenges Financiers Sheltered By Tariffs

Woodsworth, national leader of the C.C.F., celebrated his 64th birthday Friday night by receiving the plaudits of his party at a public meeting in the Masonic Temple and then in a spirited speech issuing a challenge to "the big thiefs who shelter within our tariff structure and from their protected position exploit the public with impunity."

The meeting, which closed the national convention of the C.C.F., honored the Winnipeg M.P. who has been the party chief since its inception.

David Lewis, Ottawa, national secretary, voiced the party's homage to Mr. Woodsworth and said that the progress of the C.C.F. formed the only true memorial to him.

C.C.F. Covers Major Issues in 16-Point Program Adopted at Parley

FOREIGN ISSUE HAS SPOTLIGHT AT CONVENTION

Platform Promises Security For Farmers and Urban Dwellers

With foreign policy issues holding the spotlight, the national C.C.F. convention here completed its 16 point political platform, with sections on civil liberties, agriculture, wages and hours of labor, and socialization of health and other services.

Sections of the platform endorsed Friday promised security for farmers on their farm and crop insurance, security of urban residents, regulations of hours of labor and unemployment insurance, federal relief responsibility, socialized health services, federal aid in education and protection of civil liberties.

ECONOMIC BOARD

Previously the convention endorsed establishment of an economic advisory board and import and export boards, socialization of finance, social ownership of industries and services in the public welfare, increased corporation and other taxes and encouragement of producer and consumer co-operatives.

Dealing with agriculture, the platform promised adequate adjustment of outstanding accumulated debts; security of tenure; insurance against unavoidable crop failure; immediate removal of the tariff imposts on agricultural machinery; setting up of marketing board for primary products and adequate appropriations for agricultural rehabilitation work in the Canadian west.

Regulation of hours of labor so as to distribute employment and leisure equitable, guarantee of the right to organization and collective bargaining and provision of unemployment insurance were promised in the wages and hours of labor section.

Co-operation with the provinces in creating socialized health services and extending and improving other social services were offered. On education, the C.C.F. undertook to make available to the provinces assistance in the form of grants.

AMEND B.N.A.

Active and effective steps to amend the British North America Act and bring it into line with modern conditions in an effort to unite the provinces and "remove injustices and iniquities now apparent" was promised in the section on national unity.

The civil liberties clause promised freedom of speech, press and association and religious liberty to all.

By separate resolution the convention registered opposition to "the present campaign for railway amalgamation which threatens Canada with a gigantic monopoly." It endorsed the trade union movement and urged aid and encouragement in organization of unorganized workers.

The resolution on youth declared the problem of youth should be considered the responsibility of the Dominion government. It advocated an immediate survey and suitable action and promotion of a Dominion-wide youth training scheme financed by the Dominion government.

Organizer

HON. J. M. ROBB

OTTAWA, July 30—Conservative Leader R. J. Manion announced last night selection of Hon. J. M. Robb, former Ontario minister of health, as national organizer of the Conservative party.

Well-known in Ontario public life, Dr. Robb was first elected to the legislature in 1915. Defeated in 1919 and 1923, he was re-elected in 1926 and continued a member until 1934. In September, 1930, he became provincial health minister, holding that office until defeat of the Henry government four years later.

Dr. Robb is a graduate in medicine of Toronto University, in the year 1903—the year before the new Conservative leader himself graduated.

War Action

the oft-repeated promise of the government that "Parliament will decide" is meaningless. Canada should declare her right to freedom of action in case of war whoever the belligerents may be. The C.C.F. therefore urges that all steps necessary to attain such freedom of action be taken immediately.

The C.C.F. further emphasizes the fact that the large scale manufacture of armaments in Canada so vitally affects our foreign policy that it should be strictly controlled by parliament and not undertaken at the will of private interests. In order to free Canada from these economic entanglements which lead to war and to prevent profiteering in armaments, we advocate the nationalization of the manufacture of arms, munitions and war equipment.

AIM FOR PEACE

(b) The C.C.F. believes that war is not inevitable even at this date, and that genuine collective peace action may still avert the present headlong rush to war. The C.C.F. therefore urges that Canada support and co-operate in any such collective action whose aim is the prevention of war and the peaceful settlement of existing disputes.

(c) If collective action should fail and war break out, the C.C.F. believes that our decision as to participation must be based on the determination to keep Canada out of a war whose purpose is really the defence of imperialist interests; recognizing that in the future, as in the past, an attempt will be made to dress up imperialist wars in a guise acceptable to the general public.

Europe Situation Tense

quarters in all three countries Germany's attitude over the Sudeten question is regarded as the real test of Hitler's sincerity.

Meanwhile Mr. Chamberlain will exercise his personal influence, and, through diplomatic channels, to remove any false impressions regarding the British policy which Herr Hitler may have so that the way may be made clear for an ultimate understanding.

At the same time the diplomatic correspondent of the powerful Manchester Guardian strikes an alarming note, shared by many others, in saying that the gravity of the European situation becomes more apparent every day.

The Guardian correspondent discounts the official optimism in Great Britain and says that there is ample evidence that Germany's war-like preparations on the Czechoslovakian frontier and in the Rhineland show that Germany, if she chooses, will be able to begin military operations towards the end of August or early in September.

LOCALIZE ATTACK

"It is not believed that an attack on Czechoslovakia could be localized," says the Guardian commentator, "for the attitude taken by the British government on May 21 is not likely to be abandoned, and the abruptness, indeed the scorn, with which all German commentators reject the Czechoslovakian minorities statute only deepens the uneasiness felt here."

That President Benes of Czechoslovakia will make further concessions is believed unthinkable. Indeed the Czechoslovakian preparations for an outbreak of major proportions are going on apace, and it is not believed that another European war can be averted for long if at all.

There is no doubt there are many people, particularly in financial quarters in London, who share the views of the Guardian's diplomatic correspondent, and August 15 has been freely named in these circles as the date when war may break out.

This attitude has been derided in government quarters and Prime Minister Chamberlain will devote his holiday energies to prove their predictions will not come true.

GERMANY NOT READY

It is said in official quarters that reliable information from Berlin shows that Germany is not yet ready to fight nor in a position to wage a major war. Many reasons are given for this belief.

The first is that Germany is strategically not strong enough to fight on the east and west at the same time, especially if fighting on the west means fighting Great Britain as well as France.

The second is that the German army is not in fighting condition, and that there is especially a considerable shortage of officers.

Thirdly the raw material and food situation in Germany is such that she cannot do without considerable imports and cannot risk war at this time.

SHORTAGE OF ORE

Fourthly there is a shortage of iron ore of good quality and this shortage has not been improved by the annexation of Austria, although there has been a veritable iron panic and railings around houses, churches and cemeteries have been taken to feed Germany's hungry munition foundries.

Fifthly, it is stated that the Reichsbahn, German federal railway system, is faced with a serious situation because of this shortage of raw material, and that the system could not stand the strain of heavy transport work which would be necessary in the event of war.

Sixthly, the German industry in general is suffering from a bad shortage of skilled workers, and even now orders are often seriously delayed through lack of man power, so that the added strain of military activity on a large scale would make this situation even more serious.

The fodder problem is also a delicate point in the food situation and has a vastly more important bearing on the future than even the outbreak of foot and mouth disease.

It is on all these internal trials of Germany that those supporting Prime Minister Chamberlain's attitude are relying to prove that his contention is right, and that there will be no war, but those taking the opposite view believe that German propaganda is largely responsible for the circulation of these stories and that Germany will be ready to take the risk of war on August 15 at latest.

In any event it is conceded on all sides that the big test will come when the Sudeten question is up for settlement.

DEER FLY BITE TAKES LIFE OF ALBERTA BABE

Tularemia Claims Second Victim When Raymond Child Is Bitten

LETHBRIDGE, July 30—Second suspected case of tularemia was revealed here Friday. Connie Cook, one-year-old Raymond child died in a local hospital on Thursday night following a bite on the neck thought to have been by a tuler tularemia carrier.

The child's face swelled and the blood became highly toxic while medical men could do nothing to stem the advance of the poisoning.

CASES PARALLEL

The manner of her death is said to have been parallel to that of Douglas Shaw, 17-year-old Cardston youth, who died July 22, following a bite on the lower lip by a deer fly.

Dr. R. M. Bow, deputy provincial minister of health was in Lethbridge on Friday investigating and warned the public against handling rabbits. He indicated that there are quite a number of dead rabbits lying about on the prairies these days as they appear to have been attacked by a disease which is proving fatal to many of them.

AVOID RABBITS

Skinning a rabbit infected with tularemia is said by research workers in Montana, where much work on the disease has been done in the past few years, to be most likely to cause humans to contract the infection. Wood ticks, deer flies and mosquitoes are, however, the most likely carriers.

CROPS RAPIDLY MATURING, C. N. REPORT STATES

WINNIPEG, July 30—Warm, dry weather of the past week is rapidly maturing crops in Manitoba and southern Saskatchewan. Barley harvesting is becoming general in southern and central Manitoba and to a lesser extent in Saskatchewan. Only light scattered showers have occurred throughout the three provinces and many points, particularly in Saskatchewan, would welcome further immediate precipitation, according to the weekly crop report of the department of agriculture, Canadian National Railways.

Crop conditions remain satisfactory throughout the Calgary division. Harvesting here will be later than in the other two provinces. Twenty-five bushel yields are forecast on the Stettler and Three Hills subdivision while 10 to 15 bushels are expected on the Mantario subdivision. Weather during the week was very warm with only a few showers occurring.

This condition applies also to the Edmonton division where wheat is beginning to ripen in some localities and showing the lack of moisture. Coarse grains are progressing favorably but require further precipitation to ensure a good crop. Some fall rye has been cut and wheat is expected to be ready for harvesting August 15. Grasshopper damage has fallen off in the Edmonton territory.

goes into the North West Territories under permit from the administrator of that area. Control and administration of shipments were the purpose of the investigatory phase of the trip. They landed back at Cooking Lake at 4:30 p.m. on Friday.

"It was my first trip to the north," said the minister. "I was certainly thrilled by it."

The first stop was at Fort McMurray. "I saw the salt plant and Abasand Oils there," said Mr. Low. "I can easily see where the salt company will be, supplying all Alberta's needs in all varieties of salt in the near future."

He said that there was bustle on all sides at McMurray. "The Hudson's Bay company transport was busy. There were three barges being loaded to carry supplies downstream."

On Thursday afternoon they landed at Fort Chipewayn and later flew to Fort Fitzgerald, where an inspection of various activities was carried out.

HYDRO PLANT

"Pat Ryan, well known northerner came and took us to his place on the portage, where we had dinner," said Mr. Low. "Then, about 7:30 p.m., we took off for Goldfields, where we saw the Consolidated company's properties and the tremendous development going on there. The new hydro electric plant being installed will aid tremendously in northern development."

Mr. Low said that a fine type of resident was noticed at Goldfields and the country not only looked good for the development going on there now but for the possibilities for the future. The deferred Saskatchewan election was being held and all was quiet and orderly, said Mr. Low.

Mr. Low said that Mayor J. W. Fry was in the plane going to Goldfields, while Wilfred "Wop" May, famous pilot and Northern Airways offical was also in the plane part of the time.

KNOW THEIR JOB

"You have to give Con Farrell and these northern pilots credit," said Mr. Low. "They know their job. Con certainly handled that plane well and I think the secret of his and his colleagues' success is that they do not take any chances."

Mr. Low was back at his office on Saturday.

Cornerstone For Lutheran Church Laid On Sunday

BRUDERHEIM, July 30—More than 300 members of the congregation of the Bethlehem Lutheran church will gather here Sunday afternoon to lay the corner stone of a new church which is being built by the congregation to replace the old church edifice built in 1904.

Rev. Philip Frey, pastor of the Bethany Lutheran church, Fort Saskatchewan, will deliver the message in the divine service, while Rev. W. W. Elfert, the pastor, will lay the corner stone.

The ceremony will mark a significant phase in the 41-year history of this congregation, members of which worshipped for several years in their homes before their first church was erected in 1904.

CLAIM SIDLEY AUTOPSY PLANNED BEFORE DEATH

TORONTO, July 30—A day and a half before the death of Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley, malted milk heiress, steps were already being taken in preparation for an autopsy, it was disclosed in a handful of nine affidavits filed in court Friday by the Ontario attorney general's department.

The affidavits, made by eight doctors and one lawyer, were filed in reply to claims made in an attempt to halt the inquest started here last Tuesday into Mrs. Sidley's death.

At that time it was objected on behalf of four Sidley executors that the inquest was improper on two grounds: That the body was out of jurisdiction when the inquest was ordered and that the coroner, Dr. Smirlie Lawson, had acted in a private consultative capacity in the case for William H. Sidley, the son.

Plan To Harvest

LLOYDMINSTER, July 30—Several farmers of the Lone Rock district, 20 miles south, intend to cut wheat on Monday and cutting may be general by the end of the week.

JUST 1 FATALITY AS HERDER TREKS GOATS 300 MILES

VANCOUVER, July 30 — E. J. Scattergood and his herd of goats arrived in Vancouver Friday after a 300-mile trek from McBride, B.C. They were enroute to Sechelt, B.C.

Only 10 of the 11 goats that set out with the "Pioneer" were aboard the truck that gave the strange entourage a "lift" from nearby Boston Bar to the Union Steamships wharf where the goats were to be housed until they left Vancouver.

A railway crossing tragedy near Blue River in the Kamloops district accounted for "Zivy". She was killed by a train.

Scattergood made the long trip with his herd by foot because he could not afford to pay the goats' railway fare.

Sechelt is 35 miles north of Vancouver.

Liner Aground

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., July 30—The liner Bremen ran aground entering the harbor here today and gave some of her passengers a slight shaking. After 20 minutes the liner got off with the aid of tugs, took aboard passengers and proceeded to New York.

MR. JUSTICE KRUSCHEN IN THE HYGIENE COURT OF JUSTICE

"You have no right to be ill!"

All preventable illness is a crime—

a crime against yourself, your family and your race. Listen. There would be far, far less illness and pain in this world if people troubled to keep themselves clean and regular inside. Colds, headaches and rheumatic pain would get the battle of their lives. Good health and abundant energy would be more the order of the day.

Here is one reliable step to internal cleanliness—the little daily dose of Kruschen Salts, less than one cent's worth a day—and in a civilized age it's everyone's duty to take that step.

KRUSCHEN SALTS

relieve constipation and rheumatism

Kruschen is a combination of several mineral salts which your body must get, in some way, to keep the blood pure, the inside clean, and the system generally toned up, but which you can't get in Nature's own way without abundant exercise and fresh air. You should have those salts every day; hence the importance of the "little daily dose". Every drug counter sells Kruschen in 25c, 45c and 75c bottles. It's the little daily dose that does it.

Arab Ties Torch To Jackal's Tail To Run Wildly Through Jew's Grain

jackal's tail. Freed, it runs wildly through a Jew's ripe, quick-burning field of grain.

Marines from H.M.S. Repulse — armed with the most modern weapons—quick-time along the Mediterranean's sunny shore. A bomb explodes with a roar of death among the melon and date stalls of a market crowded with Arab families.

That could have been yesterday, it may be today and it undoubtedly will be tomorrow — in the Holy Land. Why?

CONFLICT CAUSES

Fundamental causes of conflict on ground that is sacred to 900,000,000 Christians, Moslems and Jews face the British colonial office with terrible clarity. The solution, if there is one, is hidden.

There are three main reasons why Palestine is one of the most dangerous, tragic and puzzling spots in the world:

1—The British program, under League of Nations mandate, for establishing an independent Jewish nation which has increased the number of Jews in Palestine from 83,000 in 1922 to 460,000 in 1938. Return of Jews to the land which they were exiled 20 centuries ago reached a rate of 60,000 a year and resulted in sudden, extensive introduction of modern agricultural and industrial methods in a primitive land.

2—The determination of Arabs to achieve self-government in Palestine as in neighboring states and, recently, a desperate fear that the influx of Jews soon will dominate the entire Holy Land politically and economically because of numbers and modern methods.

3—The importance of Palestine to Great Britain in her struggle to ward off international threats to the Empire; particularly the military importance of the land in event of war and its value in protecting oil and other commercial interests in the near east.

PAYING OLD DEBTS

Old debts and old promises are coming back to the British for payment in the violence that swelled to new levels in Palestine this week. But when I spent three weeks in the Holy Land last December, British officials frankly admitted their original policy had collapsed after 20 years' effort to reconcile divergent interests and bitter racial animosities.

To understand today's troubles, one must look back to the darkest days of the World War when British promises were made to both Arabs and Jews in return for aid. To the Jews, they promised establishment of a national home in their ancient land. To the Arabs—according to their vehement assertions—the British promised indepenence and self-government in return for support of the tribesmen against Turkey and Germany—the great struggle in the deserts led by Lawrence of Arabia.

The two objectives have proved impossible to date, leading to eight major outbreaks of violence among Jews and Arabs in 16 years which have witnessed the killing of probably 1,600 persons. But the rivalry and conflict tell only part of the problem which Britain faces. In addition, the London government's own imperial interests are directly involved.

These are perilous days in the international struggle for survival and the land which centuries ago was a battle-torn bridgeway along the commercial route from Asia to Egypt is of great importance today in Britain's scheme for protection of the Empire's sea and air "life lines."

STRATEGIC VALUE

The Suez canal and the rich oil lands in Iraq make Palestine of particular strategic value.

From conversations with responsible British officials, I believe that Britain is convinced the present league mandate must be abandoned and replaced by another program. The only method that can be seen now is a division into separate Arab and Jewish states, with a corridor set apart under British mandate. But vigorous objections—most strongly from the Arabs—leave no doubt such a solution would be violently opposed.

EMPLOYED IN CANADA JUMPS 14,650 JULY

Quebec Only Province Failing To Improve Jobless Situation

OTTAWA, July 30.—Dominion bureau of statistics Friday reported an increase of 14,650 persons employed in Canada on July 1, as compared with June 1 this year. On the latter date 1,072,123 individuals had jobs, and a month later this total had been boosted to 1,086,773.

The increase, however, was not equal to the average gain in that month over a period of years, so that the seasonally adjusted index was down a fraction of a point from 111.9 to 111.3. A year ago the number employed was 1,134,318.

The trend was decidedly upward in all provinces except Quebec, the report says.

In the maritime provinces, Ontario and British Columbia, activity was less than at the beginning of July of last summer, but greater than in other years since 1930, while in the prairies industrial employment generally was quieter than July 1 of either 1936 or 1937, although it exceeded in volume that reported in the early summer of other years since 1931.

DENTIST FOUND SHOT TO DEATH; WIFE WOUNDED

MONTREAL, July 30—Dr. Archibald N. Jenks, prominent Montreal dentist, was found shot to death today alongside his wife who was rushed to hospital in a critical condition with three bullet wounds in her body. An emergency operation was performed, and early today the hospital reported her "still alive but in a very critical condition."

Discovery of the shooting was made by police, who were called to the Jenks' fashionable Saraguay estate, less than 10 miles northwest of the city, by a woman who appealed over the telephone to "send someone here quickly; there's been a shooting."

Poor Judgment By Pilot Caused Air Crash, Report Says

OTTAWA, July 30—The airplane crash which took the lives of pilot Archie J. Turnbull and A. J. Wallace at Laurie Lake, Man., last June 17, was due to "poor judgment on the part of the pilot in flying in very poor weather conditions," it was reported Friday by the department of transport who conducted an inquiry into the mishap.

The aircraft had been examined prior to departure and considered to be in good condition and airworthy, the inquiry revealed.

AUSTRALIAN EUCALYPTUS ARE NOT THE TALLEST TREES IN THE WORLD

The common saying that the famous Australian eucalyptus trees are the tallest in the world is not true. By actual measurement, the tallest of them ever measured was found to be 310 feet high. An unverified measurement places one single tree that once grew in Colac, Victoria, at 346 feet. This is exceeded by the tallest redwood tree, at Bull Creek Flat, in California, which is 363 feet high and probably the tallest tree in the world.

Mickey's been smoking ever since—even when there aren't goggle-eyed visitors present—and he takes an occasional beer too.

About that romance: Mickey confides she's a "pip" and in worldly fashion adds that he had another girl, but she moved away.

with the thieves", Mr. Woodsworth said.

"In doing so we shall probably face far-reaching problems of social reconstruction.

"Accepted codes of morality are being challenged. This year there was a widespread protest from Protestant churches against the bill to legalize sweepstakes. The proposal to encourage the securing of something for nothing cannot be defended. But why not a protest against the more serious practice of gambling in grain and real estate and stocks?

" 'Thou shalt not steal'—society today punishes petty theft but rewards the big thieves with its highest honors. Further, society itself steals from youth and the unemployed the opportunities for love and happiness, sometimes even for life itself. Who denounces the thief? Sometimes I wish I were a preacher!

PROPERTY RIGHTS

"Legal conceptions", Mr. Woodsworth went on "are being and must be challenged. We hear much of property rights. Mr. Bennett can wax indignant over the Vancouver unemployed occupying even public property. He would surely have taken a fit had it been company property.

"But what about the big thieves who shelter within our tariff structure and from their protected position exploit the public with impunity.

"The older sentimental patriotism cannot stand against the increasing knowledge of the conduct of national affairs which is now coming even to the man on the street.

LIVE FOR COUNTRY

"Sweet to die for one's country! Tell that to the returned men. Unfortunately we have not yet recognized that it is worthwhile to live for one's country."

Mr. Woodsworth ended by pleading for the establishment of the co-operative commonwealth all over the world.

According to estimates, there are 165,000 doctors in the United States.

HOUSE TAKES RECESS UNTIL NOVEMBER 1

Reassuring Feeling Given By Chamberlain's Firm Action In Europe

British United Press Cable
Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, July 30.—The British parliament went into recess until November unless the international situation demands a special session before then, but with many members and even some cabinet ministers feeling that such a session will be necessary. They are hopeful that the restraint which has been imposed on Europe by Prime Minister Chamberlain's firm action when the Czechoslovakia crisis first broke, and by the demonstration of the solidarity of the Anglo-French entente, will continue to keep Europe from a major war, but they are not any too sanguine.

Mr. Chamberlain's frankness in the last debate on foreign affairs before the session closed won general commendation. It gave a reassuring feeling that so long as the situation continues along present lines there will be no betrayal of British principles or British interests and that the problems confronting Europe will be matters for discussion and not for violent action.

PATIENCE TRIED

Prime Minister Chamberlain is still conducting his personal foreign policy and still hoping that Premier Mussolini will not "double-cross" him, but it was evident during the debate that his patience with Mussolini was being sorely tried. It was obvious by both speech and gesture that he regards Mussolini as an irritant more than as a menace. He obviously does not think it is worth risking anyone's life to remove this irritant or to drive Mussolini into complete dependence on Hitler.

Mr. Chamberlain still places his faith in the necessity of Mussolini to do right by Great Britain, but is prepared to see Mussolini violating the spirit of the undertaking because of the Italian premier's desire to pose as a strong, resolute man with the equal prestige of Adolf Hitler. The British leader is content to ignore the obvious pinpricks believing that Mussolini will not get any satisfaction from Great Britain until all the Italian "volunteers" have left Spain.

HARDENED ATTITUDE

Mr. Chamberlain even revealed by inference that he has hardened his attitude toward Mussolini, and this is undoubtedly due to the pressure from the house of commons to which the prime minister reluctantly submits but which Mussolini fully understands.

There is some doubt in the minds of many members of the commons as to whether Mussolini will not go off the rails while parliament is not sitting, relying on this fact to get away with any action he contemplates, but Mr. Chamberlain made it abundantly clear that he will not hesitate to call a special session of parliament if necessary and this is certain to have a restraining effect on Mussolini.

Opposition parties still think that while Mr. Chamberlain's desire for peace and appeasement cannot be questioned, the methods he is using to attain this end are wrong. But during the last debate the prime minister abandoned evasion and came into the open, which made a deep impression in all quarters.

STABILIZING EFFECT

The success of the Royal visit to France has had a stabilizing effect and all parties stress the fact that nobody on either side of the channel can now pursue divergent policies.

With this assurance members will go holidaying with lighter hearts although they realize fully that the problems of Europe have not yet been solved but have only been thrown into the post for discussion and that a crisis may break out at any moment in the next few weeks.

Air Clipper

oil to lessen her load preparatory to alighting.

Pending further investigation the Meigs was remaining in the same position at latitude 12.11 north, longitude 130.33 east. This is about 500 miles from Manila, or 65 miles east of the position given by the clipper when her radio suddenly went dead.

The radio message was intercepted by operators here shortly before 2 a.m.

The spot was directly in line with the huge clipper's southern flying route on the 1,600-mile hop from Guam, last leg of her trans-Pacific journey from California.

An oil coating is left on the surface by a plane when it sinks in the ocean. Similar oil slicks indicated the last resting place of the Samoan clipper, only other Pan American flying boat to meet disaster in three years of flying over the Pacific. Seven men were killed when the Samoan clipper exploded in midair January this year.

MENTIONED RAIN

The Hawaii clipper's last radio report at 8:09 p.m. Thursday indicated all was well. She had mentioned rain and moderately rough winds. But her log showed no indication of a storm, which might have brought lightning and sudden death to her veteran crew of nine and six prominent passengers.

LEGISLATORS TOLD CHANGE GOOD CLOTHES

CALGARY, July 30—Members of parliament could obtain a better knowledge of unemployment conditions if they "took off their good clothes" and joined the ranks of the jobless, believes Eric Poole, Social Credit member for Red Deer.

In an address to a Social Credit group here, Mr. Poole said problems facing jobless men were not understood by the majority of the members of the House of Commons.

"If they took off their good clothes," said Mr. Poole, "and went around the country looking for jobs and if they went into the bread lines, they would know the effect of this depression is greater than dollars and cents or balanced budgets."

PREMIER HEPBURN SLEEPS IN ALASKA; BICKELL AT COAST

JUNEAU, Alaska, July 30—Premier Hepburn of Ontario slept in his locked cabin Friday when the steamer Princess Alice stopped here en route to Prince Rupert from Skagway. But Bernard E. Smith, New York broker, one of the Premier's companions on an airplane flight halted at Carcross by stormy weather Thursday, told interviewers "I don't blame the premier for not getting up; I kept him awake all night."

Bickell Gets Through By Plane

VANCOUVER, July 30—J. P. Bickell, Toronto financier, roared into Vancouver late Friday in a fleet amphibian plane while his companions on a long aerial tour through Canada's vast northland wilderness continued their journey down the coast from Skagway, Alaska, by coastal steamship.

Sun-tanned and healthy, the owner of huge Canadian mining interests treated lightly the concern felt for himself and his companions—Premier Hepburn of Ontario and Bernard E. Smith of New York—when their plane remained unreported for almost a day on a 200-mile flight from Whitehorse, Y.T., to Juneau, Alaska.

SOVIET PAPER TELLS OF NEW GREAT PURGE

Japanese Efforts To Destroy Strength from Inside Is Charged

MOSCOW, July 30.—The Siberian newspaper Pacific Ocean Star tells of "a great purge" in the Soviet Russian Far East to frustrate what the newspaper terms Japan's efforts "to destroy our strength from the inside."

"In the past few months a great purge was carried on, and it still continues," the newspaper says. "The Bolshevists of Primorsk province will smoke from their holes all spies, wreckers and terrorists to the last man."

STALIN'S INITIATIVE

The newspaper, published at Kharbarovsk, says the purge was started "on the initiative" of Joseph Stalin, secretary-general of the Russian Communist party.

The Pacific Ocean Star says that if "Japanese rabble poke their noses into Primorsk province they have only themselves to blame for the consequences. They will be scattered by a hurricane of fire from the air, sea and land."

PURGE NECESSARY

The newspaper declares the purge was necessary because "Japanese imperialists resorted to their favorite methods of espionage and terrorism.

"They tried to break the iron unity of our party, shake its discipline and ruin the military effectiveness of our army and navy. They wanted to destroy our strength from the inside."

OWOSSO, Mch., July 30.—Philbert Hartshorn knows how to get prompt action from insurance companies. Hartshorn wired again: "O.K., but remember you also carry our burglar insurance." An hour later a rush telegram authorized a new pane.

Bowen, lieutenant-governor of Alberta, will take up temporary residence early in August in the home of Senator W. A. Griesbach, 12916 - 102 avenue, during a three-month absence of Senator and Mrs. Griesbach in Australia, it was reported here.

At present in Vancouver, Hon. Mr. Bowen will take over the house, August 8, while Mrs. Bowen, also at the coast, will return a few weeks later.

As Canadian delegate to the British Empire Conference of the Institute of International Affairs being held at Sydney in September, Senator Griesbach will leave the city Sunday, and will return to Edmonton in November.

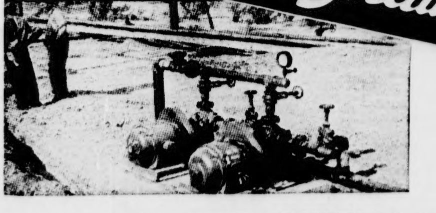
ELECTRIC POWER AND THE Petroleum Industry



Electrically Operated "Gathering" Pumps

Efficient transportation of CRUDE OIL is of major importance to the Petroleum Industry.

GATHERING PUMPS perform the first step of transportation. Located at the oil wells, their purpose is to "gather" the crude oil and deliver it to central reservoirs called "tank farms" and located near the main pipe lines.

ELECTRICALLY OPERATED GATHERING PUMPS, similar to those pictured above, perform this duty efficiently . . . with a minimum of maintenance and operation . . . and thus further assist in the development of the Petroleum Industry.

SATURDAY, JULY 30, 1938

Going Up

Edmonton's street cars carried more passengers during fair week than at any fair time since 1914. While the population of the city has grown in the meantime, the number of automobiles in and around the city has grown even faster, which no doubt accounts for the passenger record standing unbroken so long. A notable fact is that the figures for the last three years have gone up rapidly, the cars carrying ten thousand more passengers in fair week this year than last.

The receipts during these years have also been going up, though not so fast. The total for fair week was about $3,000 less than in 1929, a shortage of 18 per cent. These are the years during which the 5 cent fare has been in force, which no doubt was a factor in the rapid growth in the number using the cars.

Whatever it signifies as to the sufficiency of the 5 cent fare, or the general trend of the street railway's business, the fair time showing is that more people are using the cars at the cheaper rate, and that the revenue is approaching the highest mark set when the higher fare was charged.

The Tourists Are Coming

Edmonton people, if they note the "foreign" license plates displayed these days on the streets, will get a practical demonstration of the importance of tourist traffic, and a clearer idea of how important it is to this city that the highway system to Edmonton and on to Jasper Park be brought up as quickly as possible to the standard of the main highways in the southern part of the province.

Jasper Park is this summer for the first time a "magnet" for motor tourist traffic. Never before has there been a gravelled road all the way from Edmonton to the Park. In former seasons ungravelled sections have made the "highway" a challenge to motorists rather than a convenience. This year it can be travelled in safety and comfort throughout, and the increased number of cars—many from distant points—which pass through the city headed west is the gratifying result.

But the highway is not completed. It must be widened in parts and hard-surfaced. Neither is the highway from Calgary to Edmonton completed, though there is a prospect it may be hard-surfaced throughout before winter. The road traffic that is now trickling through Edmonton to Jasper is a symbol, and little more than that, of the tide that will flow this way when the motorists of the continent know they can make the trip without encountering mud, flying stones or dust.

The Northern Route Better

While it is not news to Edmonton people, it is none the less gratifying to read that Hon. C. D. Howe told the board of trade at Regina:

"Because of its importance in international air travel, the route from Lethbridge to Edmonton would be operated as part of the T.C.A. proper. This constituted the shortest and best route to the Orient by way of Lethbridge, Edmonton, Alaska, the Behring sea and China. It was the only overland route to the Orient, and all aviation experts were agreed that a higher state of efficiency could be maintained over that route than by the Pacific route from San Francisco."

Edmonton is already the terminal of an air service to the Yukon, and is to be a "divisional point" on a route over which air traffic will move between eastern Canada and the United States and Alaska. Mr. Howe cites the definite possibilities of this route being extended to the Orient, and says in the opinion of experts traffic can be handled over it more efficiently—which means more safely and with fewer interruptions—than over the straight-across route followed by the Clippers from San Francisco to Manila.

The T.C.A., it is suggested, is to operate the Lethbridge-Edmonton service in anticipation that this will extend into an air line to the Orient.

Do They Ever Miss One?

General Franco's explanation that his bombers fly so high they couldn't possibly make deliberate attacks on British ships is being heavily discounted by the almost daily report that they have hit another one. To bolster up his alibi the Insurgent leader should point out when—if ever—his airmen bombed a port without hitting a British ship if there was one in the harbor. Of course bombs dropped from a height are liable to land almost anywhere, but the regularity with which some of them land on the deck of any British vessel in the vicinity must look suspicious even to Mr. Chamberlain.

Another peculiar circumstance is that among the casualties—when there are casualties—there is usually an observer of the non-intervention committee. It speaks well for the courage of these men that they consent to take passage on a class of vessels so remarkably likely to be bombed. But the point is—why are they there? Is the committee still trying to keep up the pretence that it is preventing intervention in Spain? Or are the observers only there to see that some British captain doesn't run a cargo of contraband into a Government port while the Fascist allies of Franco continue to pour men and munitions into his camps?

If the committee isn't actually working for Franco it is obviously not accomplishing anything worth while, and might as well quit business and stop sending observers to be killed and wounded on the decks of ships which his airmen somehow seem to be unable to miss.

Editorial Notes

In the trenches and out, in hospitals, in barracks and in "blighty"—wherever soldiers gathered during the Great War—"Tipperary" was sure to be heard. And now, 20 years after, no veteran gathering is complete without it. Today the composer, Jack Judge, is dead in Birmingham, England. His publishers had pensioned him for life, saying he "had written a soldiers' anthem which actually helped win the war". The name of the writer may or may not be forgotten, but "Tipperary" never will. Every veteran will join in tribute to his memory.

Mr. Hitler's newspapers are displeased at the plan proposed by the Czechoslovak Government to give the Sudeten Germans a larger measure of self-government. There is no surprise in that. They were bound to denounce any plan that would not set the stage for cutting off the western section of the hybrid republic and adding it to Germany whenever the operation can be carried out without bringing war with France and Russia. Their disappointment is proof that Premier Hodka drew his plan with the idea of keeping his country intact, not of preparing for its dismemberment.

LONDON, Eng.—(By Mail)—Mr. Ernest Bevin is on his way to Canada. After a brief stay in New York he will cross the Dominion to the Pacific Coast and sail thence for New Zealand and later go on to Australia to attend the British Commonwealth Relations Conference.

J. E. NORCROSS

Mr. Bevin, who should not be confused with the Labor member for Ebbw Vale, Wales, Mr. A. Bevin, says he is taking a rest tour but it is safe to forecast that he will spend most of his time studying labor conditions and labor politics in the lands he visits.

For Mr. Bevin, although he is not in parliament, has more political control and influence in the Labor movement than the leaders of the Parliamentary Labor Party. He and Sir Walter Citrine constitute the power behind the Labor throne, as was demonstrated when two years ago they swung the Trades Union Congress over to support the rearmament program of the National government and so forced a reluctant cessation of opposition to it on the Labor members in the House of Commons.

Ernest Bevin, the son of a farm laborer, lost his parents when a child and went to work on a farm at eleven years of age. He got his education in an adult school held on Sunday mornings.

Obtaining employment at the Bristol docks he became secretary of a section of the old Dockers' Union there. At the age of 27 he had become nationally prominent in the long fight of the dock laborers for better pay and better conditions, a fight won only after a succession of strikes. It was during this period that Mr. Bevin's ability in stating the case for the men won him the popular title of "the Dockers' K.C."

Your Health

By DR. FRANK McCOY

The problem of how to keep cool during hot weather is best solved by adherence to three simple rules: first, eat lightly and use plenty of the fruits and non-starchy vegetables; second, dress suitably in clothing of light weight which allows a better air circulation around the body; and third, cool off by frequent shower baths or sponge baths. Another rule worth mentioning is the free intake of liquid by drinking plenty of pure water or by taking an abundance of fruit juices or thin soups.

Sometimes the taking of a bowl of clear hot soup will cool you off faster than a drink of water, because the hot fluid will cause an immediate perspiration, the evaporation of the perspiration serving to cool off the skin.

I wish to caution you particularly about using some of the dishes commonly taken during the summer by those who think they are using "light" foods. Any preparations containing considerable sugar will actually serve to increase the warmth of the body by providing the material needed for producing heat. For example, sometimes in drug stores during warm weather, you will see people drinking very sweet concoctions and eating cream pie, who are under the delusion they are eating foods which will cool them off. They would feel much cooler if they ate a generous salad of vegetables, or if they used a lunch of milk and fresh fruit.

You will find that it is a good plan to use a fairly large amount of the succulent green vegetables on a hot day, taking them both cooked and raw. For the dinner meal, add a moderate amount of meat and these two types of food will carry you through the hottest weather and you will remain cooler and have more energy while following a dietary regimen of this kind.

If this regimen leaves you feeling that you do not have enough variety, then at lunch try using fresh fruit, or fruit juices, or try using either with milk. The foods to be used in moderation when the weather is warm are: fats and oils, starches and sugars. These are all in the "heating" class. To avoid digestive upsets, stay away from: ice-cold drinks, "hot dogs," hamburger sandwiches, sandwiches containing mixtures to which pickles are added, and over ripe or underripe fruit. If you must eat cream pie during the heat of the summer then by all means try to make sure that it is fresh. Such pies rapidly deteriorate when held over from one day to the next.

Drinking water betwen meals and taking one or two glasses each time, will further increase your comfort during warm weather.

One of the quickest ways to cool off is to take a shower or sponge bath and these short baths may be used to advantage two or three times a day when you are so inclined.

On sweltering days you will find the best plan is to try to become interested in something. The more you sit around and feel sorry for yourself because it is so hot, and the more you discuss the weather, the worse you will feel, whereas when you become busy and interested, you will forget to suffer from the heat.

Questions And Answers

QUESTION—J. W. inquires: "What causes a youth's bones to crack when bending the knees? I have this at times and wondered what is the reason?"

ANSWER: This occasional cracking sound is one of the common occurrences which is experienced by those in good health, and is of no serious import. If it takes place only when bending the knees it indicates a lack of synovial fluid or a loosening of the ligaments in the joints of the knees. It does not mean anything in your case, so forget about it.

QUESTION—"Anxious" inquires: "I have been X-rayed and the doctor said my trouble is in the colon and that it is very bad. I have a terrible pain in the right side and some days am so sick I can not keep anything on my stomach. Am underweight. Can this be cured? Do you think it is tuberculosis?"

ANSWER: You give me so little information about the diagnosis you received that it is difficult to advise you. I suggest that the wisest plan is to return to the doctor who examined you, asking him what method of treatment he advises. Also ask for a copy of the diagnosis. In all probability, your trouble is not tuberculosis. Applying heat should give you some relief of a temporary nature. There are several abnormal conditions of the colon capable of producing pain and I have no way of knowing which is present in your case without knowing more about the diagnosis.

On the Outside

If Germany really wants to bring about peace and harmony in Europe and join in building a firm foundation for these highly desirable conditions, she should not attempt a dramatic, if ill-mannered, interruption of a long advertised modern version of the Field of the Cloth of Gold. That would be the poorest possible time for her to get credit for sincerity. It would look so remarkably like a boorish attempt to crash the gate of a "party" to which she had not been invited but whose happy serenity she hoped to shatter. A genuinely serious proposition to reach a peaceful settlement all round should be offered during a period of tranquility when it could be considered by the interested governments with nothing particular to distract their attention.

We may be sure that the two democratic governments have decided to stand steady. They are both ready and eager for peace. They are both prepared to make very considerable sacrifices in order to attain a permanent and trustworthy peace. But they are not to be tricked into dividing their forces in the face of the constant blizzard of threats that never ceases for a moment. We do not know, of course, what the Wiedemann proposition was, but we have had a number of likely "guesses." One is that Germany suggests that threatened Czechoslovakia should trade in her guarantees of protection by France and Russia for a "neutrality guarantee" by Germany, Italy, France and Great Britain. As to the value of a "neutrality guarantee" by Germany, the Czechs might wisely consult the Belgians.—Montreal Star.

Moving Toward Easy Credit

In policies affecting the country's banking system the government is confronted with a continuing problem of no small complexity. On the one hand, it wants no recurrence of the series of bank failures which became epidemic in the years after 1930, and it has adopted many safeguards to prevent such a disaster. On the other hand, it is keenly desirous of fostering an easy money credit expansion in the interest of economic recovery.

Many of the early reforms of the New Deal were aimed at strengthening the banking system, including purchase by the R F C of preferred stock of thousands of banks, restriction of security loans, tightening of regulations governing bank examination and bank investment in securities, and bank deposit insurance. While there will be no major relaxation in the various safeguards established, ever since the depression became serious last year, official thought has concentrated more and more on all possible credit-easing moves consistent with reasonable banking safety.

Recent revision of the Federal rules governing bank examiners is the latest step. This cannot be expected to induce any sudden rush of billions of presently idle bank credit into industry, but it will to some extent encourage bankers to assume type of credit risks—both as to loans and investments—which they have not heretofore been able or willing to assume. This change of course, follows a considerable series of credit easing moves by the various Federal agencies in previous months—including lowering of stock margins, reduction of bank reserve requirements, desterilization of inactive treasury gold, R F C loans to small business, etc.

Further revision of the banking laws is expected to come up in the next session of congress, partly restrictive and partly expansive. This seems certain to include control or elimination of bank holding companies and may include raising the limit on deposit insurance from $5,000 to $10,000, as well as some easing of the restrictions on bank security underwriting. The last proposal, like the R F C local program and the revised bank examination regulations, is aimed primarily at providing better credit facilities for small business.—From The Magazine of Wall Street.

One hundred years ago today (July 30, 1838), James Morrow (or Morreau), the brigand from Pennsylvania, who had led the raiders into the Short Hills of Niagara early in June, was hanged at Niagara. The execution was, of course, a public spectacle, and a revolting one at that. There are two records of the incident at my hand. The first, from the Quebec Gazette, says:

"Morreau, the Yankee land-pirate, was executed at Niagara. Owing to a want of the necessary precaution in securing Mr. Ketch, a colored man, beforehand, that sensitive functionary bolted, and narrowly escaped with his life. And, very unusual, Mr. Sheriff Hamilton was obliged to execute his own duty in propria persona—and it is said that the job was well done."

(Unhappily, the sequel was tragical, the sheriff succumbing to illness brought on by the task of having acted as hangman.)

The second account, from the Niagara Reporter of Aug. 3, 1838, lays stress upon the number of women spectators.

"The concourse of spectators was not very great. The proportion of women to that of men among the crowd was remarked to be unusual. It is really disgusting to see so many well-dressed and apparently respectable females so thoroughly unsexing themselves. An execution is a spectacle few men can witness without horror. What then is to be thought of women, to whom the attribute of modesty, gentleness and mercy are as a crown of glory, suffering themselves to be jostled in the midst of a gaping and unfeeling crowd, in order that they may enjoy the dying pangs of a fellow creature?"

The Niagara editor made it clear that Morreau was an American and had never been in Canada before; that he had "come down from Detroit in search of work and had, at Lewiston, been seduced into joining the Patriot army, and that he was not the author of the proclamation of June 3, to which his name was signed, but was made the victim of one Law, editor of the Lewiston Telegraph."

Morrow, or Morreau, may have been misled by the Canadian refugees and seduced into leading the raid on the Short Hills. But is that any reason why his name should remain on that arch at Niagara on which the Canadian Patriots are honored? Morrow was never a Canadian. He was an American adventurer, and has no right to any place of honor among Canadian Patriots.

Fire Warning

Editor Bulletin: Three months ago we were feeding straw, paid for by the government. Today the natural order of things has sent us rains in the dry belt and has given us a heavier crop of prairie hay than we have had in 30 years.

In another month this will be ripe and ready for a big prairie fire. Two members have been down and been notified of the danger. Please tell us what is to be done about it. This letter is a warning to the Aberhart government that should this catastrophe happen it is responsible for the loss. Never in 30 years has the grass been so high and should be saved.

Undesirable Trend

Editor, Bulletin: During these years of depression, with rapid change and menacing disintegration of home and community life, there is one aspect of the situation which presents a pathetic outlook and which has a vital status of our Dominion. I refer to the breaking up of the family life and home during the formative period of childhood and youth, which in thousands of cases has been necessitated by economic circumstances. This is indeed an undesirable trend in the fundamentals of nation-building and is implanting a germ in the lives of the rising generation which is nullifying that naturally inherent entity so richly endowed in the northern races: love of home, pride in and loyalty to their native land.

Through our present system drifts an aimless aptitude. We are creating and fostering a race of nomadic epicureans, replicas of the Arab and Gypsy tribes, who have become devoid of any natural desire for a permanent domesticated family life. Regretful will be the day and sad the reflections should Canada allow so menacing a trait to become a permanent trait of her domestic economy.

With due respect to our strategic geographic position, our rich natural resources, coupled with our noble ancestors, a Canada bereft of loyal Canadian sires, good homes, reasonable conditions for the upbringing of families, without the integrity of the home as a national unit in nation building, Canada, like other races which placed monetary wealth and political power before happy homes and peaceful communities shall go down to decay as a nation which lost a nation of thrift and frugality on irresponsibility and idleness. And since the institutional foundation of any nation is successful homes, neither can you hope to perpetuate happy domesticity from a generation of hitch-hiking lassies and box-car-riding laddies.

Bankers' Income

Editor, Bulletin: I was expecting to see the reaction of the public to the statement, "The debt creating system of which Social Creditors speak does not exist in itself." This reminds me of the answer a man once gave when he was asked how one might know that what he stated was the fact: his answer was "because I say so."

When people are in debt it is a liability that they owe, the debt being represented in an asset to another party. With this in mind we will see if our financial system is a debt creating or contrariwise liability creating system, or whether it fetches up where it starts in. I maintain that it does not. Bankers make their income from cost of discounting, interest, and exchange and commission. To obtain the former they loan credit and charge either interest or cost of discounting charges. In either event the liability to the bank is greater than the bankers' liability to the borrowers by the amount of the interest or discount. Therefore, it is true the borrower has not enough to his credit by reason of the loan to discharge his obligation to the bank in respect to such loan. As all other borrowers are treated to the same menu there is not enough amongst them to pay their total indebtedness in respect to their combined borrowings.

So much for the banks' customers' side of the picture. Now view it from the bankers' side. This discounting and interest under one representative ledger heading, and exchange and commission under another gathers in the tolls that the banks exact over a fiscal period when the profit and loss account will absorb these total credits, and likewise all of the representative debits of salaries, insurance, postage, taxes and all other operating costs, including stationery, depreciation to realty, etc., and then comes out a certain net profit credit, which interpreted means what the banks have taken more from the public than they have returned and is the process by which wealth is increased at the top and diminished at the bottom.

Like the reptile who does not like to swallow his prey until he first pulverizes and emulsifies him, the squeezing goes on until the man appears who was envisaged by the wisest man who ever lived when he said, "what shall it profit a man if he should gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" That individual will in due course appear, as his history and course are already marked out. OLD TIMER.

Modern Government

Editor, Bulletin: With an old order fast defeating its own ends, in these days of modern miracles and rapid change, laymen outside the partisanship arena, as well as statesmen of political renown, are beginning to realize there is more required to produce a solution for unemployment and various other problems confronting Canada than playing the old game of party politics. Under the present set-up corrupt practices begin long before the government is elected to office, and under such conditions does the government of necessity already stand condemned.

What Canada needs is a modern government to develop and own the machine. Since the small subject called man cannot continue to obstruct the laws of nature, a simpler idea is needed—the production of electricity to substitute for coal and wood, etc., to create plenty by using non-commercialized science for the benefit of humanity. Also needed is a common people's party to mark the advent of the pioneer spirit of western Canada in a humanity first campaign for a strong government to be elected on merit or principle as in a balanced plan.

"There was no insult, sir," replied the little man, with a smile. "They've done their duty, and now they are ready to do it again."

The colonel quickly paid for the round.

Bombs, Politics, Literature

By DR. H. L. STEWART

An item of recent news is about the coming, very soon, of an Air Mission to this country. It is for the purpose, says Sir Kingsley Wood, of "entering into negotiations with the Canadian aircraft industry for the manufacture of large bomber aircraft in Canada." We learn that a supplementary estimate for an additional $100,000,000 has just been issued, bringing the total British Air Force expenditure for this year up to $600,000,000. A fearful bill! But how else can the requisite security be provided?

The Canadian government insists that the order for planes in Canada shall be placed by Great Britain directly with Canadian manufacturers, and not through official Ottawa as intermediary. It is feared that the agent in such a transaction might be taken as committed to participate in the war enterprise. An excess of care, perhaps! But unwillingness to run the least risk of being involved beforehand, even by implication, in the war plans of Europe has of late become intense on this side of the Atlantic.

A share, however, of the business of manufacturing need not, surely commit any country to the purpose for which the manufactured goods are meant. We can make steel plates for the British navy, and we can mine coal for the furnaces of its ships, without adjudicating upon the righteousness or unrighteousness of the cause which this apparatus will promote. No doubt we should never take morals altogether out of business; but we may plead that business could not be conducted on terms of constant responsibility for the ultimate employment of what we produce. So Canadian firms may take those contracts with a clear conscience. Let them bestir themselves to get a fair share of the total.

The Duncan Sandys case is soon, let us hope, to be a "closed incident," which patriotic British people of every group will avoid naming again. But, like many an unpleasant occurrence of the past, it had to be threshed out very vigorously before it was either safe or wholesome to consign the matter to oblivion.

What the British people wanted to know was, not who gave disturbing secret knowledge away, but whether it was true—as alleged—that the old demons of procrastination and tradition and official etiquette were making the Air Force far less efficient than it might be. To the question, "Who told Duncan Sandys?"—as to the later question, "Who committed the blunder of summoning Duncan Sandys before a military tribunal?"—the public will turn at first a deaf ear; in time, under such irritants, it will develop a mood of angry impatience. It has not leisure for such party recrimination just now, nor will it remain long tolerant of those who waste time on debating who was to blame in that arraignment about technique and procedure. The one point of importance is that the anti-aircraft preparation shall advance with maximum speed and maximum efficiency, no matter what happens to the "career" of any individual, and he would be a bold man who at present on such matters, at the tribunal of British public opinion, would disparage the service of Mr. Winston Churchill.

Persistent rumor, subject—as usual—to but faint discrediting by official denials, has explained the delay in fulfilment of the Anglo-Italian Pact by the pressure of French influence in London. "What representations," Premier Chamberlain was asked a few days ago, "have been made by the French government to His Majesty's government, to the effect that the entering into force of the Anglo-Italian agreement before the conclusion of a similar agreement between the French and Italian governments would be regarded as an unfriendly act?" "No representations of the kind indicated have been received from the French government," was the reply. And Mr. Chamberlain added that the Italian government was quite aware of the facts of the situation.

So the House was left guessing. Mussolini's impatience with the delay is obvious; likewise his mood, much fiercer than any to which the negative term "impatience" is adequate, when he speaks of France. Conversations between Rome and Paris were to follow those so successfully completed between Rome and London.

But the French response to Fascist approach was of the cold satiric character which elicited Mussolini's Genoa speech, and something has obstructed fulfilment of the bargain Count Ciano had made with Lord Perth. It is also just a little suggestive that warnings from French sources (altogether unofficial) have dwelt on the risk of losing an old and tried friend in the hope of conciliating a very precarious new one. But no government "representations" have been received. Quite so. It is at times both practicable and desirable to collect knowledge of another country's mood, and to act upon the knowledge, without formal diplomatic interchange.

An incident which ought to lie altogether outside the realm of party politics is the award of a literary decoration. Charles Maurras has been elected to membership of "the French Academy—that sacred circle known as "The Forty," to which it is the dream of French men of letters some day to be admitted. There can never be an admission until there is a vacancy, and the long-drawn-out age of some whose talent has thus been crowned has tempted many a waiting aspirant to thoughts he is ashamed to avow even to himself.

It was Cardinal Richelieu who founded the Academy, three centuries ago, and it has served—among other purposes—to guard the purity of the French language. Would that some similar guardian might exercise a directing control for our own tongue! A standard universally acknowledged for correct English is needed as much as such a standard was ever needed for correct French. Perhaps it is needed more and more in the New World, as inroads of alien usage, from various races of the "melting-pot," become more injurious with the lapse of time.

But the election of Charles Maurras to the Academy has another aspect, which we cannot separate from politics. Great publicist as he is, does he owe his elevation to his literary eminence alone? Or does he owe it, at least in part, to the enthusiasm of one fierce political group, evoking the contemptuous indulgence of another? If we may trust Anatole France, who surely was in a position to judge, and whose membership of the Academy should have led him by no means to underestimate that distinction, the motives which govern such a choice are disgracefully mixed.

HIS HOLINESS AGAINST ITALY BEING GERMAN

Pope Advocates One Single Family For All Races

ROME, July 30—A reply by Pope Pius to the new doctrine of Italian Fascism which holds that Jews "do not belong to the Italian race" was published Friday by the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano.

The Pope did not mention Jews by name but he listed charity towards others as an article of the Catholic faith and said: "We do not want to separate anything in the human family."

His Holiness linked the new Italian doctrine with German racial policy when he said it might be asked: "Why in the world Italy unfortunately felt the need to imitate Germany?"

Not since his encyclical of June 19, 1931, on Fascist education of youth had the Pope so directly taken issue with Premier Mussolini.

His remarks, as embodied in L'Osservatore Romano's resume, stressed the difference between the church's conception of mankind as "one single, great, universal human family" and conceptions which "mean barriers erected between men and other men, between folk and other folk."

GREAT BOOKS IN BRIEF

By ELIZABETH COATES JAMES

"Huckleberry Finn"

By MARK TWAIN (1884)

(The fifteenth novel in the list of "The Fifteen Finest Novels" as selected by Dr. William Lyon Phelps).

This is the story of the adventures of Huckleberry Finn told by that young man himself. To begin with, he reminds the reader about himself and Tom Sawyer in the book about Tom, mentioning the money which they found in the cave where the robbers had left it. Each boy had six thousand dollars, which gave them a dollar a day for interest, and Huck pointed out that such a sum was really more than a body could spend.

This money was the beginning of trouble for Huck. The Widow Douglas took him into her home with the idea of civilizing him. But eating by a bell, going to bed and getting up at regular times, wearing clothes that were starched and clean—all these factors of civilization were too much for Huck. One night he ran away, finding more comfort in his old clothes and his old sugar barrel than in the Widow's fine home.

When the Widow cried with disappointment, Huck went back to try it again, but he never had a chance to follow his good intentions. His father had learned of Huck's money and he kidnapped his son, hiding him down the river in a secret place which he used when things got too hot for him in town.

CONFINED TO CABIN

Huckleberry was confined in a cabin made of logs, where he was locked securely while old Finn went after liquor each day. At first Huck did not mind; the wildness of the place was refreshing after the routine of the Widow's home, but presently things took a different turn. Old Finn began to have delirium tremens and when he saw snakes in the air, he chased Huck with a butcher knife. Huck decided to move on.

When his father was away one day, Huck broke out and set the stage for his own apparent murder. He killed a pig and used his own shirt to staunch the blood; then he bashed the door in with an ax and tore up the place in general. Taking the provisions and utensils from the cabin, Huck floated his boat and started down stream as the night shadows hid the shore line of the Mississippi.

He reached Jackson's Island safely. The natural vegetation formed a hiding place for his supplies and boat, so that Huck was happy and secure. When a few days had passed quietly, he went out hunting and ran across the embers of a camp fire. Like a frightened animal, he scurried back to his boat and hid. Fear and curiosity got the better of him, so he peeped out and cautiously crept toward the spot again.

JIM DODGES THREAT

Lying sound asleep by his dead camp fire was Nigger Jim, the Widow Douglas's Jim! Huck roused him and the two of them fell to dancing with surprise and joy to be together like this on the island.

"What you doing here, Jim?" Huck asked.

Jim told him how his mistress had threatened to sell him down the river where he would never see his family again, so he ran away. That set Huck to thinking. To help a runaway slave was bad business, but he didn't care. Jim was his friend of long standing and he would see him through his trouble.

They planned to float on down the river toward the place where the Ohio flows into the Mississippi, then to turn into the Ohio and go north, where Jim would be free.

High water came and brought debris down with it. A heavy raft came along the island and was just what they wanted. They put a wigwam on the raft holding their supplies, then tied the canoe to the back of the raft and were ready for the long miles down the Mississippi.

Adventures aplenty befell them. A house floated by in which dead people still sat around a card table. It was plainly murder for money. One of the people was old Finn, only Jim decided not to worry Huck by telling him. Another time two men in a hurry climbed aboard their raft, lying for a time.

Huck and Jim had a hard time getting rid of these men. Half of the story deals with them. One of them said that he was the disinherited Duke of Bridgewater, and the other said that was queer, for he was the lost Dauphin of France. They asked Huck and Jim to serve them and to do little things to make them forget their outraged estate. Huck and Jim did so until they found sure that they were two rapscallions and swindlers.

Huck almost got himself lynched trying to outwit the Duke and Dauphin to prevent their robbing three girls, whose father had died expecting his brothers from England. The swindlers pretended to be the brothers and were well on the way to robbing the girls, when Huck stole the money and hid it in the father's coffin. Huck and Jim just did escape with their necks intact. Later the Duke and Dauphin were tarred and feathered, to Huck's satisfaction.

PRETENTED SLAVE

In a heavy fog, Jim and Huck passed the Ohio river and since they could not paddle against the current, they went on down stream with Jim pretending to be Huck's slave. Luck did not go with them, however; for just before he was caught, the Dauphin told what he knew about Jim and at the next town the Negro was locked up.

Huck began his plan for rescue. He went to a house for help and was received by this greeting, "Why Tom Sawyer, how are you and all the family!" It was just too easy. Huck stayed with his Aunt Sally under the name of Tom, and when that young man arrived and saw the set-up, he called himself Sid Sawyer.

Together they rescued Jim in splendid style according to specifications sent up by Sir Walter Scott and Alexander Dumas in their stories which Tom had read. They could have opened the door and let Jim walk out, but they dug under the wall. Writing in blood, inscriptions about a broken heart, and an anonymous letter completed their plans. But the letter scared Aunt Sally so that she called in all the neighboring farmers with their guns and dogs. When Jim and his rescuers ran for it, they were accompanied by a rain of bullets. Tom was hit in the leg.

Things worked out though. Tom's Aunt Polly arrived on the scene to learn who was playing Sid's part, for Sid was at home with her. Aunt Sally found out then that she had been fooled about a lot of things. Jim was set free, for Tom knew all the time that the Widow Douglas had died and had set him free in her will. Huckleberry went back to try civilization again. But with misgivings.

In conclusion, Huck said that if he had known before he started how much trouble it is to write a book, he would have just left it up to Mr. Mark Twain to do the best he could with it.

CAMROSE

CAMROSE FAIR BOASTS RECORD 4,214 EXHIBITS

The Camrose annual three-day fair came to a close Wednesday night after three days of activities. Ideal weather played a great part and the huge crowds each day gave evidence of another successful fair.

There were 4,214 entries including all classes and events, which is the largest to date. Everything went off like clock work and the visitors enjoyed themselves to the fullest. J. I. MacKay, superintendent Canadian Pacific Railway, Edmonton; G. A. Staples, city freight agent, Edmonton, and a visitor, Mr. Bradley were visitors on Monday.

The Crescent Canadian Shows were on the midway. Jack Strachan of Edmonton, and his troupe delighted the people on the grandstand platform each afternoon and evening with their song hits, dances and amusing dialogues.

The Camrose Citizens' Brass band was in attendance, looking smart in new uniforms, scarlet trimmed with blue and their caps with a dash of gold.

On Tuesday, the second day of the fair, a large parade journeyed to the fair grounds. Every car, truck, tractor and vehicle was decorated with bunting of red, white and blue and from each waved numerous Union Jacks. The parade reached a mile in length. Many Indians from the Indian reserve at Hobbema were in the parade, dressed in feathers, plumes and moccasins. The Camrose bugle band under the leadership of James Findlater led the parade. Mayor Clarence Pearson, who is secretary of the fair board, made an address of welcome.

Tuesday evening, the Camrose ball club entertained the Daysland ball tossers in an exhibition ball game which resulted in a narrow win for the home club, the score being 5-3. Emery Hanson for the locals pitched 7 innings after which he was replaced by Edward Jasman.

Major and Minor Notes

By John Oliver

Telegraph wires on Friday carried the news that Jack Judge, one of the authors of the song, "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," which amounted almost to a national anthem, had died at Oldham, a suburb of Birmingham. He was 60 years old and was a fish salesman. Harry Williams, the other man responsible for this enduring song, died in 1924.

While he appears on the song as a co-author, Williams, in point of fact, according to available evidence, did not actually co-author the song. Jurge appears to have written both words and music and Williams shared only in the financial phase. The French government conferred the Cross of the Legion of Honor upon Camille Robert, who composed La Madelon, the marching song the French took to their hearts during the war—a modern "Regiment Sambre et Meuse" to the troops. Perhaps a monument will be erected to Jack Judge, fish salesman, who worked as an actor in the evenings and wrote songs as a sideline.

It appears that Williams lent Judge money from time to time to run his fish shop and part of their agreement was that in return, Williams was to share in the proceeds of Judge's songs and the two names were to go on the music as co-authors. Actually, Judge alone wrote the song.

* * *

Probably no other war song in history won such fame as Tipperary and this includes even La Marseillaise. It sprang into fame at the start of the war and enjoyed much greater fame and popularity than La Madelon.

When the first British Expeditionary Force landed in Boulogne in 1914, a newspaperman heard one of the regimental bands of the Brigade of Guards playing as the first British troops disembarked. That newspaperman really "made" Tipperary, as, in his despatch he featured the fact that as the troops got off the boat to the music by a Guards' band, they marched to a tune called "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary." The significance of the "long, long way" looking toward Tipperary as the end of the war, that mythical place all now sought, fired the imagination of the British public. Within 48 hours the words and music of "Tipperary" were presented to the public through newspapers and on the motion picture screens.

It spread like wildfire. Every band in the army played it. Every soldier sang it. It was the greatest recruiting song of the hour. Words like Piccadilly and Leicester Square, which appear in the song, were jockeyed even into the Chinese language, so numerous were the translations into foreign languages. It was the song hit of the hour. It remained a hit with the public throughout the war and until now.

With the soldiers its popularity began to wane after the end of 1914, because the war produced its own songs. "Mademoiselle of Armentieres," "Pack Up Your Troubles" and others became the popular favorites with the troops and "Tipperary" was seldom used, save on formal occasions.

* * *

"Tipperary" was not of the robust type of song adopted by the soldiers themselves. It was a pre-jazz tune, which of course, will go down the corridors of time for its historical, tragic associations.

* * *

Now both Jack Judge and Harry Williams have joined the great majority. As musicians they did not rate highly but most composers would willingly forgo the royalties accruing to a Strauss or a Debussy to have written the song that the bravest of the brave marched to and sang during the Great War and which will be remembered in history when many musical masterpieces will have been forgotten. Near his burial place, Harry Williams' parents put up a tablet to his memory, bearing the following legend: "In remembrance of Harry Williams, of Tipperary Fame, the World's Most Famous Song, which helped to save Old England." And the inscription is not far wrong.

"Over The Teacups"— Twenty Years Ago

From the Files of The Edmonton Bulletin

UNDER a very large tent, splendidly equipped, holding an audience of six or seven hundred pitched by the Chautauqua people under the management of the Ellison White Co. of New York, at the corner of 102 street and 102 avenue the first session of the chautauqua was opened on Tuesday afternoon, July 23, at three o'clock.

Improvised seats of new lumber were arranged amphitheatre style and a stage, sixteen or eighteen feet square attractively arranged and decorated similar to a theatre stage, accommodated speakers and artists. An upright piano, chairs, potted plants and ferns, with the American and Canadian flags, made a suitable setting for the affair. Two members of the W. V. R. in uniform acted as ushers and distributed programs. Bishop Gray opened the afternoon program with an invocation. Mr. A Muir Frith acted as chairman and made a few choice and appropriate remarks, mentioning the fact that the present chautauqua was the first appearance of such a thing in Edmonton, and introduced to the audience the superintendent, Mr. Kenhold of the Ellison White Co., who, in turn briefly announced the afternoon artists and the week's program.

EDMONTON is particularly fortunate in having a dozen or so parks or beauty spots of which four or five are picnic grounds. They vary in size and accommodation and are nearly all to be reached by the city electric railway. The Hudson's Bay reserve will have four small parks not yet completed, which will be almost in the heart of the city. Few cities can boast of any spots which for real beauty, location and interest show better than those of the grounds about the Parliament buildings and Government House. Besides, there are parks both large and small and not so much frequented known as Laurier Park between Quesnell Heights and the river, on the north side, and at the west end a park between what was known as Gallagher and Ross streets on Syndicate; Rutherford and Allendale on the south side, and City Park to the northwest of the city, which is bounded on the northeast by the Dunvegan Railway. There are, besides, five large parks which are delightful picnic grounds, namely, Ravine Park, on Athabasca in the West End; Rat Creek Park in the East End, of a similar type; City Park and Exhibition Grounds; Riverside Park, on the south side, and Victoria Park, best known as the city golf links.

DOROTHY DIX Says:

DEAR MISS DIX—I came from an average American family. I was clever and graduated from high school just before I was 16. My parents refused to let me have any boy friends, or go to parties, or dance, and I was crazy, like all young girls, for the innocent pleasure that the other young people enjoyed. I got a job as soon as I graduated, making $20 a week. I offered my mother fifteen, but she demanded it all. She bought my clothes without consulting my taste, or made over her old ones for me. I was high-spirited and resented the home tyranny, and before I was 17 I ran away and took an apartment of my own. I didn't know it was wrong to have the gang in every Saturday night and to let as many as would stay over until Sunday. And so I fell. I soon got a bad name, but I didn't mean to be bad. I only wanted a good time. I would have been contented with a couple of dates a week and having my friends in my mother's house, but this was denied me. So I took what I could find, and when my mother refused to let me come home on the first Christmas I was away I just didn't care any more. However, God was good to me. I met a man who loved me enough to forget my past. We have been married eight years and have three beautiful children, and you can be sure that when my girls grow up they will have good times, but they will have it at home, with their mother watching over them and seeing that it is an innocent good time. They will not have to suffer what I have to suffer in regret for the things I did because my mother drove me out of my home. X. Y. Z.

Answer:

I commend this letter to the careful consideration of all mothers of adolescent daughters because it contains a terrible warning for those women who, in trying to be good mothers, so overplay the part that they are the worst mothers in the world.

No doubt the mother of the woman who writes this letter was a conscientious woman who was doing what she thought to be the right thing by her daughter in denying her all the pleasures of youth. No doubt she thought she was keeping her daughter safe by not letting her have dates with boys, or dance, or go to any place of amusement.

But the result of her strictness did not quench in the girl her love of fun, or her desire for excitement and going places and having good times. Nor did it turn her into an Alice-sit-by-the-fire, who was content to spend her evenings at home doing crochet or reading an improving book, with only Mamma and Papa for company, while all the other youngsters were dancing and going to the movies and enjoying themselves.

All that it did was to drive the girl away from home and send her out on the road that leads to ruin. It deprived her of the protection of a home, of the guidance of her parents. It took away from her every restraining influence and just because all her natural craving for pleasure had been suppressed so long she went the limit when she could do as she pleased.

It is folly, it is stupid folly, it is criminal folly for parents in these days of the emancipation of youth, and when practically any 16-year-old girl can support herself, to think that they can keep their daughters from harm by making them recluses in their own homes; by taking away from them the money they earn; by refusing to let them have young company in their homes; or to go about with boys; or to go to dances and places of amusement and do the things that the other youngsters are doing.

The inevitable result of such tyranny is to drive the girls away from home to fill blind dates; to make pick-ups on the streets; to go to questionable places, since they are not permitted to go to decent ones; to make rash marriages; or worse.

Youth demands pleasure and youth must be served. You can't get away from that initial fact in life, and it is just as much a mother's duty to provide her growing girls with innocent amusement as it is with wholesome food. And it is her duty not to keep them under lock and key, but to teach them how to have the right sort of good times. She should teach them how to judge boys so that they will be able to distinguish between gentlemen and cads. She should teach them how to have pleasure that leave no bad taste in their mouths. And, above all, she should teach them how to draw the fine line between liberty and license.

DOROTHY DIX.

Heart - To - Heart Talks - - - - By Kathleen Norris

In Sweden if you are an irresponsible person whose entire allotment of liquor is consumed within a few days, the authorities know it, and presently your card is taken away. The general lenience of attitude works better than any other scheme I've ever studied.

IF order is Heaven's first law and cleanliness is really next to godliness, then Sweden is halfway to Paradise already.

It had never occurred to me even to dream that a country could be as fair and green and groomed and beautiful in spring finery as Sweden is in late May, or that a city could glisten and shine and sparkle, as Stockholm does, in flawless, trim purity, from the early, early morning — morning arrives full tilt at about half-past-four with flashing arrows of sunlight—until late into the lingering bright northern night.

In Stockholm you can walk ten blocks in any direction right in the heart of the city, and not find enough straw, chaff, waste paper, cigarette butts, chocolate wrappers, string, orange peel, gum or dead leaves to fill an ordinary after-dinner coffee cup. The polished hard cobbles of the fine old streets, the paved, sturdy gutters, the moving waters of a hundred brimming clear rivers and arms of the sea all shine alike in utter cleanliness.

In the wide, well-farmed country places nothing ugly offends the eye; nothing raw, unfinished, glaring with ads, polluted with dumps and wrecks. Not in Sweden! The spring sun shines benevolently down on meadows where fine, self-respecting cattle graze, on trees and placid waters, on the mellowed roofs of farmhouses where one knows life goes on calmly, reasonably, intelligently. It is like a child's dream of the country.

Sweden is so reasonable! One feels reason in the very air. There is nothing flashing, rapid, sensational in her development. Perhaps her climate forbids the lush quick growth we warmer nations know; or perhaps her being one people, undisturbed by the quicker blood currents of a hundred other peoples, helps to keep her sane.

Whatever it is, to visit Sweden is a delight. A delight when one has been struggling to aid those movements here at home that make for orderly living, for better social conditions, for regularized local handling of the problems of relief and employment. In Sweden it is as if one stepped into a world in which all these questions are just a little nearer the answer. And the answers have been reached without revolution, without bloodshed, without the destruction of church and state.

SWEDEN FORGES AHEAD

Stockholm is not a picturesque city; she is not even handsome. When the first consideration must always be warmth, warmth against an eight-months' winter, beauty has to be sacrificed. Buildings must be heavy and solid and ready to stand the long assaults of cold and storm. As for picturesqueness —doesn't it usually mean ruins? The crumbling, embowered castles of France, the faded tapestry of Venice's old palaces reflected in her canals, all these are but decaying memories of other days. Sweden does not cherish them. She goes ahead.

In the past fifty years this quiet, plodding, eminently reasonable little northern country has accomplished half-miracles in the housing of the under-privileged masses; in a wide scheme of co-operatives that includes banking and insurance with every conceivable form of buying and manufacturing; in liquor control rather than liquor elimination, and in the extirpation of disease. It is only recently that a strong movement to follow the Swedish plan was inaugurated in America. What we call social diseases are all but stamped out in Sweden now through the operation of the simplest of regulations, and will be completely eliminated, like smallpox and bubonic plague, within a few years.

I say "half-miracles" because it is characteristic of Sweden's attack upon these modern civic problems that she apparently forces nothing upon her people. Her innovations grow from their needs; they formulate them, and obey them or not as they see fit. Thus, in Sweden, if you are a respectable person, with a due sense of the use of liquor, you may go on indefinitely presenting your card, and buying your regulated allowance of hard drink, without interference or question. If you are an irresponsible person whose entire allotment is drunk up within a few days, the authorities know it, and presently your card is taken away. This general lenience of attitude does not entirely do away with bootleggers, abuses, mistakes, of course. But it works better than any other scheme I've ever studied.

Again, if you want to enter into a group of co-operatives your housing and food difficulties are enormously lessened, and you receive various dividends and bonds to boot. Thousands of Swedish families benefit in this way, live in modern apartments equipped with nurseries, assembly rooms, kitchens. In Stockholm they show you the exteriors of some of these, hundreds already in operation, other hundreds building.

LAWS REDUCED TO MINIMUM

But you don't have to go co-operative if you do not want to. There are remnants of reactionary old Tory groups in Sweden who look down upon this communal movement, or pretend to. They do not have to join it. Nobody rushes into their mansions, red-handed and shrieking and ravages their treasure and their wealth. Nobody rounds up the loafers, the slackers, the slatternly, the lazy, the shiftless, the improvident and forces them into respectable and useful grooves. They do not even deny that there is an unemployment problem, of a mild sort, in Sweden. They seem to be a great people for mild measures, for waiting until the force of example and time bring converts to their ways of doing.

Laws appear to be reduced to the minimum that means public safety and respect for the rights of others, and everything else is left to time and the good common sense of a fine race.

Moscow and Italy and Germany, where many of these good things are done, or attempted rather, in bad and cruel and despotic ways, appall an American. Moscow because communism there is a form of despotism; and with the destruction of domestic peace and quiet, the elimination of dear old household and family ways, with iron law and iron rule, they have also tried to weed the love of God out of the hearts of men.

FASCISM'S HORRIBLE DREAM

Italy and Germany because theirs is so bloody a dream, a dream that puts small children into armor, that defies the peace-making, forgiving, loving law of Jesus Christ even while claiming his guidance and protection.

But Sweden? Well, Sweden shines in stony purity over the dark brilliance of her northern waters like a star of Hope in a world gone mad. If she has a message for all of us today perhaps it might be translated into something like this:

"Men may live sanely and at peace. Children's lives may be lived in happiness and safety, free from the hideous shadow of war. Families who want to prosper may themselves form the laws by which they shall be given equal chances with all the world. Disease and drunkenness and sin may be controlled, lessened, slowly driven to an inevitable end. Monopoly and greed may be controlled. The fruits of the earth may be made available to everyone. And this without war, without sensational change, without the forceful introduction of new pagan theories and barbaric cruelty. In a time of universal stupidities, universal crimes, universal retrogression, the old civilization that means simple decency and common sense and brotherhood may still go on."

I should like very much to visit Sweden again.

Win Fame for Yourself In a Story Contest

How did demure Eve Brown win a story contest? Eve knows if you want to write, you can. Learn a trick or two, plunge in.

Think not of fussy plots but of an incident in your life — your good-by to the man you didn't marry. Describe his quirks of character that made you say "no."

One successful writer wrote a short story about a refused proposal. She made the climax a visit to a dove-house, described the feelings of the girl when, eager for love, she saw how ludicrously her solemn suitor resembled the bowing birds.

Use vivid incidents to bring out the point of your story, but keep it real, make your reader feel it "might have been."

Our 32-page booklet by an editor-author tells many more ways to make stories clever, salable. Know the tricks of good writers, editors' "blacklist."

What To Do

By Phyllis Belmont

I am planning to give a garden party for the benefit of our Missionary Society and would like very much if you could give me suggestions on how to decorate my garden and what refreshments to serve. Thank you.

MRS. M. G. G.

Answer—Nature generally does all the decorating necessary in a garden, but if your garden lacks color and the flowers are not as profuse as you would like them you can always fill out here and there with a few blossoming petunias and geraniums. You can add color to the porch with bowls of garden flowers, potted plants and colorful chair cushions. A gay-hued garden umbrella or two on the lawn always adds a festive touch. If your party lasts until well after dusk, by all means avail yourself of the soft glow of Japanese lanterns. A refreshment table gains new appeal when set up under the trees or on the porch. Flowers in the center, of course, and fruit lemonade in a large glass punch bowl and cookies for refreshments.

If Cooled And Sweet These Beat The Heat

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Don't get overheated thinking up cool desserts. Try these. They are a cool end to a warm dinner.

COFFEE PARFAIT

(Serves 4 to 6)

One cup strong, freshly-made coffee, ½ cup sugar, ⅛ teaspoon salt, 2 egg yolks beaten, 2 cups heavy cream whipped.

Heat the coffee, sugar and salt over hot water until sugar is dissolved. Pour the mixture over beaten egg yolks, return to the double boiler. Cook as for custard (stirring over hot water until mixture forms a coating on a metal spoon). Cool.

Whip the cream. Fold in the custard. Then pour into a mold (or use your coffee can), seal tightly, and let freeze without stirring in ice and salt. Or pack in the trays of your automatic refrigerator and let freeze, without stirring.

SOUTHERN SHERBET

(Serves 4 to 6)

One tablespoon gelatin, ¼ cup cold water, ¾ cup sugar, 1 cup boiling water, one No. 2 can grapefruit juice, ½ cup lemon juice, 1 egg white.

Soak gelatin in cold water. Dissolve gelatin and sugar in boiling water. Cool. Add fruit juices. Freeze to a mush in ice cream freezer or trays of mechanical refrigerator. Fold in beaten egg whites and continue freezing until firm.

And here's something a bit more on the heavy side of the icy mountain.

BANANA DATE ROLL

(Serves 4 to 6)

One cup whipping cream, ½ pound marshmallows finely cut, ½ pound dates chopped, 3 ripe bananas diced, ¼ pound chopped walnut meats, 8 graham crackers finely rolled.

Whip cream. Fold in other ingredients except cracker crumbs. Shape mixture into roll 3 inches thick. Roll in crumbs which have been spread on waxed paper. Chill in refrigerator 3 to 4 hours. Slice about 1 inch thick. Top with some additional whipped cream and maraschino cherry, if desired.

Raising A Family - By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Terry comes in all warm and bothered because he couldn't win even one race.

His daddy had been a track man, and Terry knew his father had been watching and rooting for him.

O. R. Barton

"I can't run fast enough," panted the boy. "Skinny Tripp has such long legs no one can beat him."

"You didn't half try," was his father's comment. "There is only one way to win and that's to make up your mind you are going to."

"That's what you think. I did try."

"All right, but you just aren't naturally a winner, boy. You know before you start anything that you're licked. You can't beat anybody. I'm not so proud of my son today."

"All right. All right," said Terry. "I'm no good and I know it. I wish I could go some place where there were no games or races or school, and get a minute's peace. Maybe some day I can make money, eh?"

"Money, h'm. That's about the only thing you haven't tried, but I wouldn't wager a jitney on it."

His father was as right as he was wrong. The boy was afraid of himself. He did lack the magic trick of conviction. Yet, his father should have kept quiet.

HAD OWN ABILITY

Terry had a gift for figures. He was industrious and put his heart into things he really liked. His marks were medium in most subjects, but not in arithmetic. He had the makings of a fairly good business man.

Many children are considered second-raters by their parents. In Terry's case, he was trying to make good in his father's way. He had a lot of power in other direction still untapped.

After a while the disappointing child begins to lose what little faith he has left in himself. This is the very thing he must not lose. So try to encourage self-assurance by praising the thing a child does well, and not omitting praise for the things he "tries" to do well, regardless of success.

Most people are second-raters. There is always somebody else ahead. Why should we, then, get after our youngsters when they don't surpass their fellows? This is the way to deepen inferiority, and fix it for all time.

Glorify Step By Step Lest You Be Wearied

By ALICIA HART

Once you have made up your mind to be a lovelier looking, more attractive person, it's a good idea to start the self-improvement campaign rather slowly and cautiously. Otherwise, you're likely to become bored with the whole business and stop doing any of the planned routines.

For instance, while you may know good and well that you ought to get rid of the excess oil in your hair, do something about the large pores on your nose, and, in addition, lose a good deal of weight, it's best to tackle one problem at a time. If, all at once, you start dieting and exercising, brushing your hair every night, getting a weekly scalp treatment, using a special pore mask on your nose several nights a week, and spending about twice as much time on your face between times as you used to, you're likely to be weary of the very thought of your appearance by the end of the first week.

But if you just concentrate on doing reducing exercises for fifteen minutes every morning and eating much smaller portions of everything at every meal for one month, then begin on your hair, improving yourself will seem much less of a burden.

During the second month, keep on with your exercises and your diet, and be sure to brush your hair every night. By the beginning of the third month, you'll be enough of a Spartan to be able to continue the improvement routines for figure and hair and do something to improve your face, too.

And remember, of course, that no routine can be one hundred per cent effective if you do it haphazardly or only when you happen to feel like it. Regularity is all important. Don't "go off" your diet just because you have company. (You can make believe that you are eating more than you are.) And don't give up exercises just because you are a house guest for a week-end. (Do them quietly in your own room and not even your hostess will know what you're up to). Stick to whatever you start. And you'll notice results more quickly than you perhaps think right now.

Ceremonies Of Midsummer Lend Color And Interest To The Social Scene

Wedding Bells Ring For Three Couples Here On Friday

"Happy is the bride that the sun shines on" . . . and happy indeed the many lovely brides, who have chosen mid-summer for the occasion of their weddings will be, if the maxim is as popular in reality as it is in the imagination of all lovers of romance. Never a cloud has marred the blue of the sky, which in the evening is bright with stars, and perhaps we might think of this as an harbinger of the happiness to ensue for the bridal couples, who have this season made their advent into Edmonton's younger married set.

Lovely mid-summer weddings continue to highlight the social calendar and Friday was chosen by three betrothed couples as their wedding day.

MacKENZIE—ROXBURGH

Sheafs of gladioli in salmon and pink, fringed asters, and sweet pea blossoms backed by green fern and arranged with taste about the hearth made a fragrant setting on Friday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Roxburgh in Garneau for the evening ceremony at which their only daughter, Jean Margaret Roxburgh, became the bride of Alasdair R. MacKenzie, only son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. MacKenzie, also of this city.

IN COLONIAL MANNER

Colonial frock of lustrous white satin patterned with tiny white crepe stripe was the simple gown the bride chose for her wedding.

Fashioned toe-length and with skirt falling in soft and drifting folds, the dress was made with slim fitting bodice and small puffed shoulder sleeves. Peter Pan collar at the throat and a row of tiny satin-covered buttons from the throat to the waist line were pretty features of the costume. Her flowers were a simple shoulder cluster of pink bluish roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride and the bridegroom were unattended for the simple ceremony, and Dr. George A. Macdonald, of Knox United church, spoke the marriage service.

Music for the ceremony was provided by cousins of the bride, Miss Jessie Harrold and Miss Margaret Harrold, who played together. A piano solo was played during the signing of the register.

THIRTY-FIVE GUESTS

A reception to approximately 35 guests was arranged in the home following the ceremony, when the bride's table was laid in lace and silver. Tall white tapers tied with bows of mist tulle lighted the prettily decorated table which had for its centrepiece, the lovely bride's cake.

Mrs. James M. Roxburgh wore to receive her guests a smart frock of Parisand toned sheer, with matching accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of talismen roses.

Welcoming the guests with Mrs. Roxburgh, Mrs. R. B. MacKenzie, mother of the bridegroom, was frocked in rose beige silk, with shoulder corsage of talisman roses.

Mr. G. A. Clayton proposed the toast to the bride during the supper hour.

Late in the evening the bride and bridegroom left for a three weeks holiday to the Pacific coast, the bride travelling in a modish flowered silk frock, with navy blue accessories and top coat of light rust color.

They have taken a house in Stony Plain Road, where in late summer following their wedding trip they will be at home to their many friends in the city.

The birde received early in the day of her wedding a cable of congratulation and best wishes from Mr. and Mrs. MacKenzie, grandparents of the bridegroom, from their home at Dingwall, Scotland.

SMITH—JONES

Solemnized quietly in late afternoon on Friday, a very pretty wedding was performed in the Edmonton South home of Rev. J. T. Berry, when Evelyn M. Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Jones of McRae, became the bride of Mr. Edwin D. Smith of Pibroch, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Smith of Edmonton.

Rev. Mr. Berry performed the ceremony.

PRETTY PICTURE

Dressed for her wedding in a smart suit of heavy white silk, with blouse of blue, white hat trimmed with blue and other accessories in white, the bride made a pretty picture at her wedding. She wore a corsage of roses at her shoulder.

Miss Edna Jones, sister of the bride, who was bridesmaid, was dressed for the occasion in a smart suit of blue, with matching accessories.

Mr. Rudolph Smith, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Following the ceremony, a small family supper was arranged in the Corona hotel, and later in the evening they motored out to Pibroch, where a reception was arranged in their honor.

WILL BE GUESTS AT RECEPTION

Later in the week they will visit with the bride's parents, at their home in McRae, where also a reception will be held.

July Shares Honors With June As Month Of Marriages

Mr. and Mrs. Smith will take up residence in Pibroch.

MANNING—CROXTON

Delphinium in blue and gladioli in rose pink banked about the altar of lovely Christ church on Friday evening made the setting for a pretty wedding of interest to many friends in Edmonton, when Miss Addie Gertrude Croxton and Mr. John Donald Manning exchanged vows of marriage.

The daughter of Mrs. Gertrude Croxton of this city, the bride is well known in social and club circles in town, and the bridegroom, the second son of Mr. and Mrs. I. R. Manning, known in business circles.

TRADITIONAL WHITE

A gown of white, fashioned with satin skirt and lace bodice, was the lovely bridal ensemble the bride chose for her wedding. The frock made floor length, and with slender sleeves fitted to the wrist, high simple throat line, was a pretty frame for the dark beauty of the bride, and contrasted becomingly with the tones of the flowers in the church.

A veil of embroidered net falling softly about her shoulders completed her lovely ensemble and her flowers were pink roses arranged in a shower bouquet.

Miss Beldora Croxton, sister of the bride, gowned in a summer frock of turquoise point d'espirit, was the bridesmaid. A taffeta jacket of matching tone, gloves and tiny cap from which a small blue veil fell softly, were lovely accessories to the frock, and her flowers were pink carnations and sweet peas.

Rev. W. M. Nainby, uncle of the bride, conducted the marriage ceremony, and during the service organ music was provided by Mr. Bayzant.

Mr. Oswald Manning, brother of the bridegroom was groomsman.

WEDDING SUPPER

Reception to thirty-five guests was arranged following the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Manning, where the wedding supper was served from a table decorated with sweet pea blossoms, baby breath and tall white tapers. The tiered bride's cake was centrepiece for the table.

Receiving with the bride and bridegroom, Mrs. Gertrude Croxton, the bride's mother chose a fashionable hostess gown of flowered ninon on a background of black. Her accessories were in black, and her hat a large picture model, was of blue. Her corsage of flowers were red roses.

Mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. I. R. Manning was frocked in royal blue lace. She wore also a large hat of blue, and at her shoulder a corsage of pink roses.

Mrs. Oswald Manning was dressed becomingly in a floor length gown of navy blue net, with smart little top jacket of white. Her flowers were a cluster of sweet peas.

TO THE BRIDE!

Toast to the bride was proposed by the best man, Mr. Oswald Manning.

Assisting with the passing of tea were Miss Ena May, Miss K. McGrath, Miss B. Geise and Mrs. G. Christian.

Mr. and Mrs. John Donald Manning have planned to make their home in Edmonton, and will shortly be at home to their friends.

Friends in teaching, social and campus circles in Edmonton share interest in the announcement made today of the engagement of two University of Alberta graduates, Miss Dorothy Niddrie and Mr. John West Chalmers, whose marriage day has been set for late August. Knowledge of their engagement was made known today by Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Niddrie of Edmonton South, parents of the bride-to-be.

Interest of friends in Manitoba is claimed also by the news, for the bridegroom-to-be, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Chalmers of Boissevain, Manitoba, is a graduate of the University of Manitoba, receiving his Bachelor of Arts degree from that university before attending Alberta University.

Both are graduates of the University of Alberta, the bride-elect obtaining her Bachelor of Science degree in Household Economics from the university in 1936, and the bridegroom-elect his master of arts. Attending the university School of Education, they both have their diplomas in teaching.

Miss Niddrie has been teaching at Raymond, Alberta, for the past while, and Mr. Chalmers has been in town during the past year, working as editor with the Institute of Applied Arts. During the coming year, however, he will teach at Holden.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Kitchen have returned to their home in the city, after a most enjoyable holiday spent visiting at the Pacific coast and in Kamloops, B.C.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Talbot have left to return to their home in Los Angeles, California, after visiting Edmonton as the holiday guests of Mr. Talbot's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Talbot.

Local Girls Share Music Scholarship

Miss Mary Brownless and Miss Elsie Tanner have shared scholarship honors in the $50 scholarship offered by the Edmonton Alumnae chapter of the Toronto Conservatory of Music Alumni association. Announcement was recently made by the chapter, the award being given jointly on recommendation of the Toronto Conservatory.

Miss Brownless is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Brownless, while Miss Tanner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Tanner, both of Edmonton.

Offered to assist a piano student resident in Edmonton in further study in Toronto Conservatory examination work under his or her local teacher during the season 1938-39, the scholarship required that the student be under 18 years of age, have an honor standing at least in the grade 10, 1938 piano examination, completion of grade 3 theory, special ear end sight tests, a high academic standing and a test piano number selected by the Toronto Conservatory of Music.

R.A.F. Officer Takes Bride To England

Married here quietly in mid-July, Pilot Officer J. Stewart Young of the Royal Air Force, and his bride, the former Sally Sinclair, are sailing from Quebec on the Empress of Britain today for England, where the bridegroom is at present stationed at Bishforth, Yorkshire. They plan to make their home in that city.

Their wedding claimed the interest of many mutual friends in Edmonton, the bride being the daughter of Mrs. R. Sinclair Sommerville of this city, and the bridegroom the son of Dr. J. G. Young. He has been an officer of the Royal Air Force for some time, coming to Edmonton on leave for his marriage.

Mrs. T. Ewart, who, with Mr. Ewart, is leaving shortly for a holiday trip to Scotland, was surprised at her home one evening recently by members of her former Sunday school class of Eastwood United church and at the happy party which ensued was made the recipient of a lovely writing case. Guests present were Mrs. D. Allen, Mrs. F. Longworth, Mrs. J. Young, Miss K. Clarke, Miss G. Jones, Miss R. Evans, Miss H. Ross, Mrs. G. Lowe, Mrs. T. M. Blacklock and Miss N. Ewart.

A Time To Speak

By Nellie McClung

(Copyright Reserved)

This is an age of doubt! Nothing gets by without questioning.

In a recent issue of the Winnipeg Free Press there appears an article entitled "Why Victoria?" in which the writer, one C. E. Valentine, raises doubt degarding Lantern Lane. He says he came out to see it with expectation. It had an attractive sound to him. He believed it would be a lovely wooded estate. But he found the grass dry, and the house standing in a bare field. He had seen Saskatchewan farms with more trees, etc.

That is not so bad. I have seen Saskatchewan farms, with beautiful trees, lawns and shrubs, and I do by quoting Saskatchewan. I like it. not mind Mr. Valentine's comparison. He cannot hurt my feelings

LOTS OF WORK

Anyway I do not expect him to see Lantern Lane as I see it. He did not go on his knees on a piece of matting three years ago and dig out twitch grass to put in his onions. He did not carry pails of water in the purple twilight of the June evenings to the little nut trees, nor make a ditch to irrigate the pepper plants. Nor did he put in the asparagus seed and see it pass its preliminary stages, and come into bearing this summer. He has not eaten any of its thick purple tender stocks. He has not sprayed the trees, nor rose bushes (he will note that I still insist we have trees), nor set traps for the earwigs. He probably does not know what engaging little things the earwigs are, nor how interesting it is to roll up newspapers and put them in the crotch of a tree at night and then go out on the trap lines at dawn when a rosy glow is warming the eastern sky, and see what the night has brought.

Perhaps he won't believe it when I say the earwigs prefer an old yellow newspaper to a fresh one, but they do, with a decided preference for the Family Herald and Weekly Star.

I' PRECIOUS THING

He probably does not know it is the thing you work for that becomes precious. But that is the old law of compensation.

No, Mr. Valentine has seen Lantern Lane with only the cold eye of a tourist, a critical, show-me, tourist.

I know exactly what happened! He went first to see Col. McMullen's beautiful estate overlooking the Straits, with its rockeries, pools, flowering shrubs: acres of lawn as smooth as velvet; its rose arbors and ornamental low stone wall over which a virginia creeper, green turning to pink, runs in fans. And then perhaps he went down the hill to see Mr. Hunter Gordon's exquisite Japanese garden, with its dwarf evergreens, lily pond, azaleas and Russell lupins.

BLAZE OF COLOR

Then he came over, with them in his mind, and looked at Lantern Lane, with its easy, impressionistic horticulture, and his eye fell on a field where the tulips had died down. There was a vacant slope before him (it is all planted in gladioli this year and will soon be a blaze of color, but of course he could not foresee that.) So he said the house stood in a bare field. Fields naturally have to be bare sometime. What does he expect? Victoria is green all winter and most of the summer, but it does close down at one season of the year. And, not knowing that Mr. Valentine was going to come at that very low moment, we just let the stalks die down the processes of nature go on as usual.

But we cannot let him away with the suggestion that we are short of trees. A great wall of evergreens shelters us from the north—they are not ours, but what of that? Cherry trees border the lane, in fruit now, but they must have been merely bare trees when Mr. Valentine saw them. Perhaps he did not recognize them as cherries and saw only their twisted branches. He would not know that the row of trees which stand in front of the garage are apple trees, with one pear and a few walnuts, all of which bear fruit after their kind and in their season. He even ignored the two monkey trees.

Strange as it may sound, I never thought of this neighborhood as bare, or burnt, even in the dry part of the year, even when the grass is dry as he says. I see it as a whole, and it is beautiful at all seasons.

Mr. Valentine would not know how closely knit we are here. He would not see Mr. Edward's strawberry field just beside us—or Mrs. Carr's loganberries, or Miss Towler's rasperries, over all of which we have "running rights"—not by any dark-of-the-moon arrangement either, but by the good will of the owners. He probably did not notice Mr. Lester's five hundred white Wyandots blanching the meadow below the hill, or know that Mr. Lester goes fishing some times and divides his catch among the neighbors. He wouldn't know that there is a fine circulation of books and magazines every month when Mr. Aldous and Mrs. Carr get their supply from England, and Miss Olive and Miss Janesta Stavely get their from Ireland, and Inez and Mitchell get theirs from the Book Club.

And always there is good talk, and a conversational exchange that is stimulating and pleasant. He would not know about the little Coronation Oak Tree which came from Great Windsor Park, and which was planted by Nancy Ley on her tenth birthday; nor of the Margaret Beaton gladiolus which is now in spike and will burst into snowy beauty in a few days.

I am writing all this in deference to the letters I have been receiving from readers who are wondering if I am merely a fiction writer. They are disturbed by Mr. Valentine's strictures on Lantern Lane. One man enclosed Mr. Valentine's story and merely wrote these words on the margin—"Speak up, Nellie!"

That is what I am doing now!

When I showed some of the correspondence I received on this subject to the neighbors, they offered to make an independent audit of the trees and shrubs, but after some discussion we decided against it. After all what does it matter about the number of trees?

If Mr. Valentine comes again, and he seems to hold out some hope that he may, we will show him the Ant-Hill, and the Flanders Poppies, and let him listen to the drowsy murmur of the quail under the lavender, and we'll give him a setting of onions. That will convince him that his first impression was right. Lantern Lane is an attractive place.

Fascinating

Vincent Astor, New York, socialite, and tiny actress Shirley Temple, her curls hidden underneath a bandana, are fascinated, according to the expressions on their faces, as they watch the antics of the ring-tailed monkeys at the Bermuda government aquarium in Hamilton, Bermuda.

JUNIOR WHEAT GROUP ENJOYS BIG FIELD DAY

Young Agriculturists Instructed In Methods Of Cereal Production

MORRIN—The Morrin Junior Wheat Club held its first annual field day at the farm of George Storch, six miles northwest of Morrin. As the junior president was unable to attend, Arthur Ridley, vice-president, presided.

An interesting program was carried out consisting of speeches by Mr. Whitbread, district agriculturist; Mr. Pettinger, representative of the Alberta Wheat Pool, and Mr. Kemp, horticulturist from the Olds School of Agriculture.

Mr. Whitbread spoke on cereal varieties and gave a good outline of how to take care of pure seed and the importance of a high grade product in order to hold Canada's share of the grain trade in a highly competitive world market.

Mr. Pettinger encouraged the members to do good work and follow instructions carefully so as to make progress. Mr. Pettinger also touched on the club work in in the United States and encouraged the boys and girls to carry on, always knowing that in unity and co-operation there is strength.

Following Mr. Pettinger's speech the gang went to inspect Laura Storch's junior wheat club patch. After a thorough inspection, the young set played softball while those more interested in horticulture listened to Mr. Kemp outline how to propagate rhubarb, how to lay out the grounds around a home, how to plant the grounds, what sort of materials to use and generally how to make things beautiful as well as useful around the farm home.

Country And City Boys Are Eager Campers

RED DEER—Twenty-three country boys from the district are enjoying life at the Red Deer Rotary health camp at Sylvan Lake, where they will be until July 27. The camp opened on July 4 with 23 boys from Red Deer as the first guests. Weather was fine for their stay and they also had a great time. One evening a group of Rotarians from Red Deer went out and played baseball and took part in a concert around the council ring. Corn on the cob and ice cream followed. More Rotarians visited the country boys.

On Wednesday 26 town girls went to camp. After them there will be girls from the country.

Mrs. W. H. Hanna, of Red Deer, is in charge of housekeeping arrangements at the camp for the summer. Phil Fawcett of Calgary is supervisor of the boys' camp, and Miss Mary Lawson and Miss Phillis Long, both of Red Deer, are in charge of the girls' camp. The Rotary club committee of Dr. J. B. Long (chairman), Fred Turnbull and E. J. Snider, are in general charge of the camp for the season.

LLOYDMINSTER SCOUTS ENJOY SUMMER CAMPS

LLOYDMINSTER — Visitors to the camp of the First Lloydminster troop of Boy Scouts and the Southminster troop camp found the youngsters comfortably settled in a beautful spot at the south end of Long Lake near to the Anglican Indian residential school. Tents are pitched at the foot of a steep slope, which is clothed with dense woods, dotted with large spruce. A spring of clear water trickles down under the roots of the big trees, to mingle with the waters of the nearby lake.

Scoutmaster Frewing has about 18 lads, mostly of the First Lloydminster troop, together with some Maidstone scouts and the United church Scouts of Lloydminster. Swimming, boating and hiking fill the long summer days, and the boys also find time to decorate each tent site with intricate fencing and name boards for the patrols, carved from peeled logs and willows from the surrounding brush.

Scoutmaster J. Speers has the Southminster Scouts established in a nice location about half a mile further along the margin of the lake where the boys are accommodated in three tents, and enjoying a good time under their experienced leader.

The camp is expected to break up this week-end, so that the First Lloydminster troop can be on hand for services during the Lloydminster exhibition next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

CAMP IS HELD FOR TRAINING FOR LEADERSHIP

Courses For Leaders Of Young People's Groups Are Given

Of particular interest in United church education work in the province is the annual leadership camp which opens at Kasota Beach, Sylvan Lake, on August 1 and continues for eight days of intensive study, fellowship, worship, sports and camp life.

The school is sponsored by the Christian Education committee of the Alberta conference, and the director is Rev. Russell Ross of Leduc. Outstanding leaders in the various departments of church youth activity have been secured to give instruction, and a fine and varied program is assured.

Leading the Bible study group is Rev. D. H. Telfer, M.A., B.D., of Wesley church, Calgary, while the courses in Sunday school leadership will be given by Rev. H. C. Burkholder, field secretary of Christian education for British Columbia and Alberta. Mrs. Burkholder will give training in conducting young peoples' groups and in girls' work.

Boys' work leaders will find the course under Alvin J. Cooper, provincial boys' work secretary, of great value, while Mrs. J. E. Buchanan of Spruce Grove, specialist in children's work, will deal with that subject and with vacation schools. Mrs. D. H. Telfer is acting as camp hostess, and Mrs. A. J. Cooper, camp nurse.

Realizing the value of leadership training, many of the leading Sunday schools and churches of the Edmonton district are making special efforts to send delegates to this camp. Registrations are being received by A. J. Cooper, 302 I.O.O.F. building, Calgary.

Girls And Scouts At Camp Fires Fete Each Other

LLOYDMINSTER—A number of Lloydminster girls have just returned from a camp held at Salt Lake, a short distance from Chauvin, some miles south of here, which was conducted by Miss Ruby Walker, assisted by Miss Evelyn Stephens and Violet Walker.

Olive Yates was voted the best all-round camper, and prizes were awarded to Dorothy Plant, Thelma Nelson, Joan Hepburn and Olive Yates for the Bible test.

One evening during the camp the girls had as their guests the Chauvin Boy Scouts, who were camping at another part of the lake under the direction of Scoutmaster Leonard Wilson, Presbyterian missionary at Chauvin. The girls were entertained by the Scouts on the following evening. Both evenings were spent around camp fires.

A DOLL A MONTH

The purchase of "a doll a month," to be given to the Boy Scouts for their next Christmas Toy Shop, is one of the year-round activities of the Lethbridge, Alta., I.O.D.E.

15th Troop Scouts Raise Camp Funds By Entertainment

Enterprising St. Stephen's 15th Edmonton Scouts are well on their way to a successful summer camping excursion as a result of a successful concert they conducted recently in the Palace Gardens. Getting under way at 8:30, the first number on the program was camp fire singing by the whole troop.

Winners of the same event at the 24th of May competitions held at Black Mud Creek this year the St. Stephen's scouts, a great many of whom are of Welsh decent, come by their singing ability honestly.

Other events on the program were solos by Miss Eileen Clevely, Mrs. J. Langdon, Miss Daphne Christenson, Mrs. A. Russell and Mrs. P. McCullough. Miss Christenson and Miss Clevely were notable along with other very young performers, Althea Biggs and Eileen Anderson. Miss Anderson gave a violin solo, which was well received and Miss Biggs demonstrated her tap dancing and acrobatic ability.

FOUR STAGE SKETCH

A sketch "Cook and the Cookies" was very well put on by four members of the troop namely, Frank McCusker, Eric Woolman, Russell Norris and Elmer McLaughlan. Another sketch, later on in the program was ably put on by George Strachan, Allan Clarkson and Eugene Aratiman. A banjo and song specialty by Lorice Kirk was followed by conjuring tricks by Jack Williams. The program was closed by more campfire singing by the whole troop.

Success of the concert is attributed to the arranger and supervisor, Mrs. P. McCullough. Present at the concert was provincial executive secretary, W. S. Backman, who spoke briefly. Accompanist for all solos was Miss G. Culverhouse, master of ceremonies was Scoutmaster Ben Woolman.

At the last meeting of the 15th Edmonton Scout Troop, scouts and scoutmaster said farewell to Patrol Leader Jim Suttle, who left this week with his parents to take up residence at Folkstone, England. Scout Suttle has been associated with the 15th Troop for over two and a half years and has been patrol leader for the past eighteen months.

Just at the conclusion of the night's program, the scout and his father, a member of the St. Stephen's group committee, shook hands with all his mates and in a brief talk said how he had enjoyed scouting with them and that he intended to continue with a troop in the old country.

Suttle, a First Class Scout, recently earned his "Class A cord." He is also the holder of a full quota of proficiency badges.

NINETEEN CUBS SPEND TEN DAYS AT CAMP WOODS

RED DEER—Nineteen Cubs of the First Red Deer pack had an enjoyable ten days' camp at Camp Woods, Sylvan Lake. Each day's program started at 7:30 with exercises to the gramophone after flagbreak, and morning prayers followed by morning "bones." Inspection of tent sites and grounds resulted in keen competition.

Each Six had its own tent and everything was kept in excellent shape. The competition resulted in a win for the Purple Six with 200 points. The White Six had 198 and the Red Deer Six 194.

Cubmaster H. E. Callender had the able assistance of three Scouts—P.L. Bert Little, George Neal and Keith Moyse. Ray Meeres of Red Deer, one of the original members of the first Red Deer troop of Scouts started in 1910, camped with the Cubs for a few days. Geoffrey Mott, now of Vancouver, B.C., and another original member of the first troop, was a camp visitor.

The following Cubs attended the camp: Purple Six—A. Densmore Sixer), M. Roe, P. Arnot, B. Densmore, D. Gore-Hickman, D. Jarer), D. Smethurst, P. Leppard, R. dine; White Six—J. Fresh, Odorless Air Always ....

Because the modern ice refrigerator is air conditioned, it gives you three-way protection: Constant cold, proper moisture and clean-washed air. So the modern ice refrigerator does more than simply keep foods cold. It protects them against rapid drying out—keeps them fresh and flavorsome.

A modern ice refrigerator keeps food flavors from mingling. It constantly collects all food odors and disposes of them through the outlet.

Their beauty of appearance makes every housewife proud to own one.

They are low in price, high in quality, and guaranteed in every way.

Here Is the Proof

Comparative tests of the keeping qualities of an Electric Refrigerator and an Air-Conditioned Ice Refrigerator were made with the following results:

Loss after 24 hours—

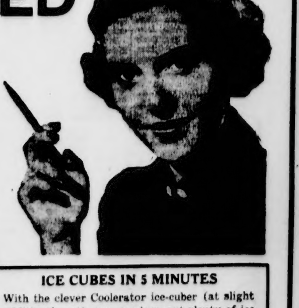
	Ice	Electric
Beef	5.6%	10.1%
Bacon	3.8%	8.2%
Cheese	2.1%	4.3%

The results showed that the Electric Refrigerator dried the food out twice as fast as the Air-Conditioned Ice Refrigerator.

The Ice Refrigerator has 2 main advantages:

(1)—In the Ice Refrigerator the air must circulate down the back and up the front and must pass under the ice through the wet metal fins where the water from the melting ice absorbs the food odors, which are carried away in the run-off water. This washing of the air on each circuit of the cabinet keeps the accumulation of odors down and the air consequently smells quite fresh as compared with the smell in an Electric Refrigerator.

(2)—The washing of the air in the Ice Refrigerator keeps the air of a constant humidity and prevents the food from drying out to any serious extent. In the Electric Refrigerator the moisture evaporating from the food is frozen on the cold unit and the air becomes drier and drier.



ICE CUBES IN 5 MINUTES

With the clever Coolerator ice-cuber (at slight additional cost), you can turn out plenty of ice cubes in only five minutes—you need never run out of ice cubes again when you need them most! What's more, they're better cubes — crystal clear, taste-free and hard-frozen!

Anglo-American Proposed Trade Plan May Expand Commerce

FOREIGN PACTS TOP ISSUES OF PARLIAMENT

British Government Prorogues After Settling Many Problems

LONDON, July 30—Parliament adjourned Friday after a strenuous session, with a possibility it may reassemble before the appointed date of Nov. 1, if conditions warrant ratification of the Anglo-Italian treaty.

Only a corporal's guard of members attended as the house flew from subject to subject, including some sharp exchanges between the government and the opposition over the bombing of British ships in Spanish waters.

Oliver Stanley, president of the board of trade, announced that the complex negotiations leading toward the Anglo-American trade treaty were being expedited "To obtain a treaty fair to both parties resulting in the expansion of trade between the two nations and may be the first step towards the expansion of trade elsewhere in the world as well."

25 DEBATES

Foreign affairs dominated the session just closed, the commons having 25 debates and the lords 10 on international matters. It is estimated the government answered 5,000 questions on a multitude of subjects in this category.

Among the important events of the session were the Anglo-Italian treaty, signed April 16, but unratified pending a "settlement" of the question of intervention in the Spanish war; and the Anglo-German treaty with regard to Austrian debts, which included an undertaking to negotiate for better trade relations between the two countries.

The Anglo-Eire treaty was another feature of the session which pointed the way toward improved inter-governmental relations.

In the domestic field legislation was enacted relating to the coal and film industries, civil aviation, air raid precautions and holidays with pay.

RAISE INCOME TAX

The budget raised the income tax to five shillings six pence in the pound (27½ per cent), the highest in many years. The government authorized the purchase of supplies of wheat, sugar and whale oil, wartime raw materials, although the fabric of the sessional program was the government's vast rearmament program.

As the house wound up its business Friday the government was under fire for the Spanish Insurgent attack on the British freighter, Dellwyn.

"The government stand by the view expressed by the prime minister on July 12, which was that His Majesty's government have made it plain that they cannot accept as legitimate the deliberate bombing by aircraft of merchant ships," declared Richard Butler, under-secretary for foreign affairs, in replying to opposition questions.

"Reports hitherto received suggested that the attack on the vessel was deliberate," Mr. Butler said. "If on further investigation this view is confirmed, the British government will at once request the commission which is being formed to investigate such cases to examine without delay the circumstances of this attack."

Better

DETROIT, July 30—Dave Rubinoff, the violinist, was reported "resting comfortably" early today at Harper hospital after suffering a relapse. Rubinoff came here after undergoing an appendectomy at Battle Creek. Peritonitis set in and two other operations were performed.

What's New On The . . . RECORDS

BEING A REVIEW OF THE BEST NOW BEING TRANSCRIBED FOR GRAMOPHONES

By JOHN OLIVER

Most recent RCA-Victor records to hand continue to provide not only variety, but genuine entertainment with not a little education added for good measure. There are included in the numbers played selections that will appeal to a wide following of varying musical tastes.

There are only a few organists in the world whose musicianship, as well as technical capacity, place them on the same plane as Dr. Charles M. Courboin. Dr. Courboin is the organist whose playing on the Grand Court organ, at Wanamaker's in Philadelphia, has won him world wide renown. One of the leading organists of the world, Dr. Courboin is given an opportunity of having at his disposal an organ unsurpassed among the finest of the world.

In the latest parcel of Victor records to hand, Dr. Courboin plays two Bach numbers, the Aria, from Suite No. 3, in D, more familiarly known as the Air for the G String, and the Chorale-Prelude, Fervent Is My Longing.

BELOVED AIR

Here is an arrangement of the beloved air for the G string—so called—which has been transcribed for organ by Dr. Courboin himself. His performance of his own arrangement is in exquisite taste in registration, and is replete with brilliant colors, warmth and a devotion to composition and instrument that is apparent at all times. At the same time, the interpretation is imaginative and distinguished and is a most convincing reason why Dr. Courboin is rated among the first string organists of contemporary times.

Equally enthusiastic praise can be bestowed upon the impressively devout chorale-prelude, Fervent Is My Longing. This is a melody employed by Bach in many ways and in many places. It was one of his favorites, but never did he use it with more telling effect, or to greater purpose than in this number. The sense of spaciousness and wonderful tonal color could not be accomplished elsewhere than on this mighty Wanamaker organ, which stands unsurpassed among the princes of the king of instruments.

SNAPPY MARCHES

This is a season of the year when band concerts flourish and orchestras take to lighter things, to the enjoyment not only of the audiences, but of the players themselves.

Consequently, a double sided record by the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, and including two Sousa marches, Stars and Stripes Forever and Semper Fidelis, is most welcome. The Boston orchestra stands alongside the New York Philharmonic and the Philadelphia Orchestra to make the trio of United States' outstanding orchestras.

Sousa wrote no more popular marches than the two here dealt with. Assuredly his Stars and Stripes Forever is his most popular and deservedly so. It is stirring, has melodic appeal and is scored brilliantly. Semper Fidelis for years has gone along with Washington Post as second in popularity. On this double-sided record the great Boston orchestra throws itself into the spirit of these ingratiating marches and the result is something that will refresh you on a hot day and even if you have an attack of "blues" they will revive you and make you feel like "going to town."

TOP NOTCH

A few weeks ago Kirsten Flagstad, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Association, contributed a double-sided operatic record, accompanied by the Philadelphia Orchestra, and now she returns with a double-sided record of two popular songs, with piano accompaniment, namely, Oh Lovely Night by Landon Ronald, and At Parting by James H. Rogers. It comes as a delightful surprise to hear this lovely voice, so used to Wagnerian roles at the Metropolitan, sing contemporary ballads in English. In her concert programs, Mme. Flagstad has scored outstanding successes with both these numbers and doubtless the recording was in answer to many requests to perpetuate this success.

There is no doubt as to the excellence of the singing and while one may prefer her in the operatic roles in which she has come to be so closely associated, nevertheless by way of a change, it is agreeable to hear her in the ballads.

GROUND FIRES NOW THREATEN TWO DISTRICTS

Ground fires are blazing in the Athabasca and Smith areas of the northern part of the province, according to reports reaching the forestry branch of the provincial lands and mines department from the inspector in the district. They are under control.

While no new outbreaks were reported on Saturday the hazard through the entire northern part of the province remains and a considerable number of fires are burning.

At the head of the Porcupine River there is a large fire, which is being fought by a crew, while in the Brazeau-Athabasca forest reserve there is another blaze, which is reported under control.

Two fires are burning in the Whitecourt area, one 25 miles from Whitecourt and another 50 miles.

Further north there are other blazes.

In the Grande Prairie district there are a number of small fires burning, mostly in the ground and in other parts of the north ground fires are reported.

Lack of moisture has kept up the hazard, which will increase the longer moisture is delayed.

Manning Speaks In South Sunday

Hon. Ernest C. Manning, minister of trade and industry and provincial secretary, is a Calgary visitor for the week-end. Leaving here on Friday afternoon, he spoke at Didsbury at night. He will attend to government business at Calgary on Saturday. On Sunday he will speak at the Prophetic Bible Institute and will remain over Monday on further business. He will be back at his office on Tuesday.

Inquest Order When Newsman's Daughter Is Found Dead

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C., July 30—Inquest will be held here today into the death of 26-year-old Grace Mewhort, whose body was found Friday in a slough near this Cariboo city. The girl was reported missing Thursday night. She was the daughter of James Mewhort, publisher of the weekly McBride Bulletin.

Led by police, a search party of citizens and boy scouts combed surrounding bushland before the body was discovered in eight feet of water near the Canadian National Railway main line.

Prior to discovery her suitcase, which she had been seen carrying, was found nearby. She was headed towards the centre of the city at that time.

Miss Mewhort had been working here for several months as a maid in a private home but last Saturday she left that work to take employment in the hospital.

SOUTH DISTRICT HAS NEW CASES HORSE DISEASE

While the sleeping sickness disease which has struck the horse population of this province, continues to recede in the northern areas of the province, new cases continue to appear in the south, according to Dr. Percy R. Talbot, provincial veterinarian.

On Saturday it was reported that three farms within a radius of 20 miles of Calgary had been struck by the malady.

Dr. Talbot stated that the 4,000 doses of vaccine ordered from New York, in addition to the 2,000 doses already used, would arrive here on Tuesday next and would be immediately distributed.

In the meantime Dr. Talbot and his staff are keeping close contact with veterinarians in various sections of the province and are taking all measures possible to alleviate and prevent the disease.

NEW ZEALAND BOYS EAGER TO SEE THINGS

VANCOUVER, July 30.—A party of 19 boys from Waitaki high school, Oamaru, New Zealand, were greeted here Friday by Mayor G. C. Miller after their arrival on the Canadian-Australasian liner Aorangi for a month's tour of the west.

"We had a wonderful trip," said one of the boys, "and we are certainly keen to see all there is to be seen. This is a pioneer trip for all of us, and we shall want to do it again."

The party will visit Calgary next month before returning to New Zealand.

AUTO-BICYCLE CRASHES HURT TWO IN CITY

Two persons were injured, not seriously, in auto-bicycle accidents in the city Friday.

William McCallum, 12936 118 street, sustained painful injuries to his elbow when his bicycle upset on McDougall Hill after it had been allegedly crowded into the curb by an auto said, by police, to have been driven by William McCowan, 9503 100 street.

Gwen McArthur, 11843 83 street, sustained injuries to her left leg and left elbow and severe body bruises, when her bicycle collided with an auto allegedly driven by Louise Miller, 10631 73 avenue, at the north end of the high level bridge.

Intelligence Is Moot Point When C.C.F.-ers Meet

Political intelligence of Alberta citizens became a moot point Friday night at the Masonic Temple during an address by David Lewis, Ottawa, national secretary of the C.C.F.

Mr. Lewis had just finished lauding Albertans for their independence in politics. A voice from the audience interjected: "That is because we are more intelligent than people in other parts of Canada."

The speaker answered, amid applause, "I will not debate that point. I am your guest."

Julius Caesar was born in July, and the month was named in his honor.

C. Grant MacNeil M.P., for Vancouver North, was elected national vice-president, succeeding Prof. J. King Gordon of Montreal.

The six members elected to the national council by the convention were Miss Mary Crawford, Edmonton; Rev. T. C. Douglas, M.P., Weyburn; Miss Beatrice Brigden, Winnipeg; David Lewis, Ottawa, national secretary; Prof. F. R. Scott, Montreal and E. J. Garland, national organizing secretary.

MORE "LUNGS" TO BE BOUGHT IF NECESSARY

Alberta department of health is willing to buy "plenty" of "iron lungs" for treatment of infantile paralysis cases when they are needed, Health Minister Dr. W. W. Cross said here today in commenting on a request from Calgary Medical Association for more "iron lungs."

The department owns two but both have never been in use at the same time and it is believed they will be sufficient, Dr. Cross asserted, adding: "If not we would have bought more." He said one had been brought to Edmonton and the other would be left in Calgary.

CHURCH VACATION SCHOOLS ACTIVE

TORONTO, July 30.—Nearly forty thousand boys and girls of the United Church of Canada will this month participate in church vacation schools operated in nearly 400 United Churches throughout Canada, it was announced today by Miss NeTannis Semmens, children's work secretary of the Board of Christian Education of the United Church, schools are being held in large cities, small towns, the open country, in isolated mission fields, in fishing villages of Newfoundland and in the fishing districts of British Columbia.

Church vacation schools are "schools of Christian living," Miss Semmens explained. The schools are made up of groups of boys and girls who are sharing service enterprises, studying the Bible, worshipping, and learning by doing. One of the new features of the church vacation school is a series of trips to industrial plants, so that the children might learn more about business and industry. Handicrafts also play an important part in the program of the schools. Character-developing activities, picnics, games and dramatics make up the remainder of the program.

Miss Semmens said that vacation schools are "graded schools in Christian living for those of every age who can attend." Largest groups are in the primary (six, seven and eight years), Juniors (nine, ten and eleven years). Remarks made by children who have attended vacation schools are: "It is a place for no mischief on hot days"—"I liked the stories best, and I bet the others did, too."—and "The worship services about God were grand."

LUTHERANS WILL LAY CORNERSTONE

In a special divine service on Sunday afternoon, July 31, Bethlehem Lutheran congregation at Bruderheim, Alta., will lay the cornerstone of its new church building which is at present under construction. The Rev. Philip Fry, pastor of Bethany Lutheran church, Fort Saskatchewan, will deliver the message in the divine service, and the Rev. W. W. Eifert, pastor of the congregation, will lay the cornerstone.

Bethlehem Lutheran congregation was organized in 1897 with eight families of pioneers and for a number of years worshipped in the homes of its members. The first church edifice, 24 by 40 feet was dedicated in 1904 and served the congregation until June of this year when it was wrecked and dismantled to be replaced by a larger and more modern structure. The dimensions of the new church are 34x64, and construction will be of frame and stucco. The members, showing a splendid spirit of willingness and co-operation, are doing most of the work gratis. It is hoped that the new building will be ready for dedication early in the fall of this year.

Baseball, Bicycle Race, Seba Regatta and Picnics Are Planned

A large number of sport events and picnics are planned for Monday, Edmonton's annual civic holiday, both in the city and at lake resorts, besides some celebrations to be held Sunday.

Among sport events is the senior baseball game at Renfrew park, in which Belmonts will meet Cardinals, starting at 6:15 p.m. Monday. Arrow Busses and the Columbus club will also tangle at Renfrew park at 3 p.m. Sunday.

BIKE RACE

Bicyclists have been training hard for the annual 100-mile race from Red Deer to Edmonton for the Bennett cup. The race starts at Red Deer at 10 a.m. and, judging from the time made last year, should finish about 3:00 p.m. in Edmonton, in front of the McLeod building.

Seba Boat Club will hold its annual regatta at Seba beach, Lake Wabamun, over the week-end, with the main events on Monday. The two-mile men's swimming race for the Alberta championship and the McGavin trophy and the half-mile women's championship will be contested. There will also be canoe races, sailing races and many other events.

More than 1,000 persons are expected to attend annual celebrations of the German-Canadian Reunion association. A banquet will be held Saturday night at Edelweiss hall at eight o'clock, religious services Sunday morning, a picnic at Victoria park on Sunday afternoon, followed by a concert in the evening at the Masonic temple.

CORPS PICNIC

The Canadian Corps Association is to hold its children's picnic at Victoria park on Monday afternoon.

Tournament of the Alberta Lawn Bowling association continues Monday on Edmonton bowling greens.

Golf is also on the sports list for the week-end. Eaton golf challenge match will be played at the municipal links starting at 2 p.m. Sunday. The Edmonton Country Club golf tournament will open at 10 a.m. Sunday.

MORE ELEVATORS OPEN TO HANDLE BIG GRAIN CROP

Idle for a number of years as a result of poor crops in the Canadian west, several hundred grain elevators are being prepared to help handle what is expected to be the largest crop in 10 years. According to local grain men, the bulk of the re-opened elevators are in Saskatchewan, while about 100 of the buildings are in Alberta.

Harvesting of the western Canadian grain crop, predicted to be as high as 350,000,000 bushels, will require the help of hundreds of men, and the unemployed rolls should begin to show a decline as the wheat cutting gets under way.

Impressed with the north's future, Hon. Solon Low, provincial treasurer, and Mayor John W. Fry were back in the city Saturday after an air trip through the north.

FLOOD LIGHTS ARE USED FOR PLANT GUARD

Increased Police Patrol Used After Power Sabotage

Flood lights, a special duty night-watchman and increased police patrols are precautions that have been taken by the provincial government to prevent recurrences of sabotage to buildings and plant at the parliament building property.

Throughout Friday a special watchman paraded the grounds while police prowler cars made "the rounds" of the grounds and plants at irregular and frequent intervals.

The most spectacular precaution taken by the government to prevent a renewal of sabotage was a giant searchlight anchored at the top of the legislative buildings, south side.

This light swings in a slow half circle sending a solid wall of white light on the government buildings situated in the grounds. Its beam can be seen all over the south side of the city. In addition to this light the main and side entrances to the buildings are brilliantly lighted, adding to the risk of any person attempting further window breaking.

Poultry Raisers Hold Field Day At Plant Monday

Edmonton Poultry and Pet Stock association will hold a basket social and field day at the Oliver provincial poultry plant Monday afternoon. Demonstrations on the value of the poultry plant will be given while a program of sports and games has been arranged. An invitation has been extended to all interested in poultry or poultry products to be on hand. Tea and coffee will be provided, and those desiring transportation to the plant are asked to be at the corner of 81 street and 118 avenue not later than 1 p.m. Monday.

U.A.T. Purchases New Luxury Plane For Coast Route

G. W. G. "Grant" McConachie will leave for Winnipeg Saturday evening to take delivery of United Air Transport's new Fleet Airline, first of a fleet of three twin-motored luxury air liners to be put into operation on the company's Edmonton-Whitehorse and Vancouver-Whitehorse runs.

Mr. McConachie will take delivery of the ship Monday, will fly it to Edmonton Tuesday, and on Wednesday will fly it to Vancouver. On Thursday, with Mr. McConachie at the controls, it will take off on the inaugural flight of the Vancouver-Whitehorse mail service. The plane will be equipped with radio and will have a cruising radius of 1,000 miles.

Loan Forms Now Forwarded Here

Forms for the city's application to the Dominion government for a two per cent loan of $237,500 for municipal improvements were completed and sent by special messenger Saturday to the provincial treasurer, it was reported by City Commission Robert J. Gibb. Approval in detail of the applications must be given by the provincial government before they are forwarded to Ottawa.

Pedestrian Hurt In Street Fall

M. Murphy, 302 Lockerbie block, sustained a severe gash in his forehead when he tripped and stumbled against an electric light standard at the corner of 108 street and Jasper avenue late Friday evening. He was taken to the Royal Alexandra hospital in a Smith's ambulance for treatment.

The Inquiring Reporter

The Inquiring Reporter sallied forth to find re-actions to the question "should Edmonton offices adopt the afternoon half-for-tea" habit. He received the following replies.

A. W. MILLER, barrister. I think it a fine idea. A cup of tea in the afternoon is a great refresher. I have it regularly.

HELEN NORTON, stenographer: I take a cup of tea in the afternoon when I feel like it as I am my own boss. When busy with important work I find that a cup of tea is a great stimulant. Where possible, I am of the opinion that Edmonton business houses would find the afternoon tea interlude would produce better working results.

TOMMY AIRD, dairy employee: It would not be practical in a business like ours. No doubt in England, where the four-o'clock habit is quite an institution, meal times are arranged a little differently than here and they can manage a spot of tea in the afternoon.

• • •

HERBERT LAWSON, clerk: The afternoon tea drinking habit is fairly well established in Edmonton, although there is no general suspension of office routine. The usual custom is to drop down to a counter for a sip of the "cup that cheers" and a drag on a cigarette. Tea in the afternoon is very refreshing and how!

IRVING WOULD REDUCE POINTS IN PARTY PLAN

Members of the C.C.F. will be "political children" if they campaign in the next federal contest on the lengthy election platform adopted at the national convention here, William Irvine, Alberta section chief and former M.P. for Wetaskiwin, said Friday.

Mr. Irvine's remarks came after the 16-point political platform had been passed plank by plank and was to be adopted as a whole. He said that no candidate could possibly discuss that platform in any single meeting, and recommended that a "fighting political manifesto" of salient clauses in the spirit of the platform be drafted.

After discussion, the incoming national council was instructed to take this matter under advisement and take suitable action.

MAYOR FRY IS KEEN BOOSTER FOR NORTHLAND

His Worship Returns From Aerial Tour Filled With Enthusiasm

Back at his desk Saturday morning after a six-day aerial junket through the north, right down to the Arctic ocean at the mouth of the Coppermine, Mayor J. W. Fry was voluble about the wonders of the northland and enthusiastic about its commercial advantages to Edmonton.

His Worship travelled with W. R. "Wop" May, superintendent of Canadian Airways, and was piloted by Rudy Heuss, North Sawle and Con Farrell. They gave me a wonderful time," he said "You have a great feeling of safety with those boys."

MILL IS RUNNING

Consolidated Mining and Smelting company's new ore mill at Yellowknife [illegible] reported. He was amazed at the processes the ore must be put through to produce the gold.

At Coppermine the plane in which he travelled picked up a woman passenger and her three small daughters, aged three to eight. "When we landed at Yellowknife, the little girls were amazed at seeing their first tree, and they were all hepped up at seeing a cow," he said.

Noting that the north's mining potentialities have not yet been proved, he added, "They show every indication of wealth, though, and it is wonderful the amount of money that is being spent in development. You see these great, big pieces of machinery lying around on the rocks. The companies evidently have faith in it."

HEPBURN'S ROOMS

He stayed at Yellowknife, in rooms in Vic Ingraham's partially constructed hotel which had been finished for Premier Mitchell Hepburn's party. "But they woke me up at eight in the morning, nailing siding on the outside wall," he smiled.

The mayor added a warning that men should not go into the north looking for work unless they have the means to get back. "It is a cruel country to be stranded in," he said.

WARM WEATHER WITH SHOWERS FORECAST HERE

Getting around toward the middle of the holiday season, Edmonton's weather is approaching the last of July with a steady supply of midsummer temperatures.

Highest reading on Friday was 76 above, registered at 3 and 4 p.m., while Friday night the mercury went down to 52 above, registered from 4 to 6 a.m., before returning to 63 above at 9 a.m. Saturday. At that time, with the sky overcast, the forecast was given as "warm, probable showers."

The forest fire situation in the near northern areas got no help from the weather during Friday and Friday night, the 8.20 a.m. report from the region showing not a drop of rain. Temperatures at that time ranged from 60 above, at Spirit River, to 43 above, at Dawson Creek.

HAPPY CROWD THRONGS HALL FOR CARNIVAL

Three-Day Legion Show Ends Saturday Night; Many Prizes

Entering the record books as another successful evening, the second night of the Canadian Legion carnival passed into history on Friday as festivities wound up at midnight.

Crowding the Memorial hall, gay throngs gathered around the decorated booths and paused in their activity only when an announcement of a draw winner was to be given.

More prizes were given to the patrons of the carnival Friday night, the evening's grand prize, a radio set, being won by Mike Melnyk, 107 Craig Nair apartments. Five more $5 attendance prizes were pulled out of the revolving drum, the lucky holders of the tickets being Miss Mary Edwards, Miss K. Carmichael, Melvin Lauer, A. Clark and A. J. Hollingsworth.

Also given away during the evening as attendance prizes were several white Angora rabbits, but the names of the people who won the furry creatures were not taken.

Because of the crowds which have been packing the hall for the past two nights the carnival committee has decided that the doors will be opened this evening at 7:30 p.m. instead of 8 o'clock as on the other two nights in order to make the evening larger, longer, and better.

With their work in providing school bursaries to children of war veterans depending on the proceeds from the three-day frolic, the carnival committee, under Manager Joe Fairley, is looking forward to the biggest crowd of the three nights on Saturday, when the winner of the 1938 Fordor Sedan will be announced.

According To Culbertson

By ELY CULBERTSON

The unkindest thing that fate can do to some players is to give them an excellent suit. The fact that they can see there is at most one loser in their own suit often blinds them to the enormous advantage of playing the contract in partner's announced suit. For example, South's bidding in the hand shown below, although very bad, was in no sense exceptional. It is my sad conviction that thousands of players would select the same faulty contract.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 hearts	Pass	2 spades	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 no trumps	Pass	5 hearts	Pass
6 hearts	Pass	Pass	Pass

Even though West made the very opening lead (a low diamond) that was most favorable to declarer, there was no play for the contract. South of course had to concede the missing heart king and, long before a club discard could be made on dummy's spade suit, West had shifted to club, and East had collected the setting trick.

Perhaps South was led astray by North's five heart bid, but if so, I strongly recommend that he (and others of his kind) devote more study to the four-five no trump convention! The five heart bid by North was in no sense a raise, or even an acceptance of hearts as trump. It was a forced response to the four no trump conventional bid, i.e., North having no ace and no additional values had no choice but to sign off in the lowest bid suit. My guess is, however, that South was not misled by the five heart bid but that he deliberately selected hearts as trump because of the excellence of his own suit. The fact that North had bid and rebid spades obviously had little effect on South. As a matter of fact, it is a close point whether South should have supported spades immediately instead of rebidding the heart suit. The future bidding would have gone a little smoother if he had done so, but the result would have been the same if, over North's five hearts, South had made the correct final decision of bidding six spades. Surely, as between a suit that had been bid twice by North and of which South had the A-K-X, and another suit which obviously might have a loser, there was no reason for indecision.

Normally good play by North at a six spade contract would have been successful. South's heart suit could have been quickly established by two ruffs.

Budge vs. Bill

Track Ideas

Mudcats Draw

ONE of the things that makes sport a sort of chronic infection is the never-ending search for absolute perfection. Fans and athletes are forever striving for perfect form and few have ever attained it. Generally speaking, champions are the ones who are shooting at perfection while the near-greats are those who are content to be good enough to beat some other prominent contender. It is the constant drive toward perfect form that makes comparisons of champions an absorbing subject for fans.

Just now the tennis experts of the United States are in the midst of a red-hot argument over how Big Bill Tilden would have shaped up against Donald Budge if they had met when both were at their peak. So far the consensus of opinion is that Big Bill would have given the California redhead an artistic lesson in tennis craft.

Those defending Budge rest their case on his sheer power which he can apply from either side of the court, his coolness and poise and his amazing stamina which makes it possible for him to play match after match with the throttle wide open.

On the other hand the experts behind Tilden point out that the big fellow would not have been swept off the courts by Budge's sizzling service—he proved long ago he could handle cannon-ball services. Tilden probably had the finest array of tennis weapons ever flashed on a court. He could blast them over the net or play them soft, cut them as delicately as a surgeon or lay them down straight and hard. He was a master of spin and could apply over-spin or under-spin at will. His reach would permit him to cover more court from the baseline than Budge can and the amazing [illegible] would [illegible] keep pace all the way with the [illegible] he had the [illegible] whenever he chose and still [illegible] Budge has never learned. Sandy Somerville, Ted Adams to Battle for Canadian Amateur Crown

LONDON, Ont., July 30.—Sandy Somerville, familiar figure when Canada's amateur golf championships are decided, will walk the last 36-hole journey in the 1938 tournament with a modest, 21-year-old southerner, Ted Adams.

Over Somerville's home course, the London Hunt Club, Sandy made quick work Friday of one bid from the United States for his title and his smooth, relentless game served warning that he is ready to defend his sixth title and fight for his seventh.

Against Ven Savage, 28-year-old golfer from Salt Lake City, Utah, Somerville had an easy time, winning 12 and 11 when Savage suddenly went off his game from the start.

The Utah golfer's progress through the tournament had caused many to give him a chance against Sandy. But when the pressure was on, it was Sandy who came through unflustered.

BAD DRUBBING

The golf-wise tried to recall as bad a drubbing in a Canadian semi-final, and couldn't. Because of the one-sided match, the gallery's interest shifted quickly to the hot fight Adams had on his hands in disposing of Ed Kingsley, Savage's pal from Salt Lake City.

It was a see-saw affair all the way, the young school teacher from Columbia, Mo., coming through to a one-up victory with a birdie three at the 38th hole.

The international setting for today's final will send this smiling youngster, who loves golf and hasn't had half a dozen lessons in his life, against a tried champion with the odds in Sandy's favor.

BOB ALLAN

The young man shown above will lineup with the rest of the boys Monday morning at Red Deer for the 100-mile bicycle race to Edmonton. Bob won the event in 1936 and was just inches behind last year's winner, George Chrismas. The race will start at 10:00 a.m. and wind up around 3:00 p.m. two blocks south of Whyte avenue on 104 street. There will be a public address system at the finish line to give the crowd full particulars. Major Hogg of Red Deer will be the official starter.

Benefit Ball Game Scheduled For Renfrew Park

The Don Bosco Club will sponsor a benefit baseball game at Renfrew Park, Saturday, August 6, at 2:30 p.m., between the local professional hockey players augmented by three local amateur stars, and an Edmonton all-star team.

The proceeds will be for Catholic Youth organization purposes.

Roger Jenkins, who is managing the hockey players team, has not as yet definitely decided on his lineup. Norman McIntyre, the manager of the All-Star team, expects to have his team lined up by the first of the week.

Both managers, however, have selected their starting pitchers—Leroy Goldsworthy for the hockey players and Buck Eaton for the All-Stars.

Clarence Campbell will arbitrate in a new field of sport when he will share the umpiring duties with Jimmy Dunn.

Arrows Must Win Sunday To Retain First Position

Arrow Busses, leaders of the Senior Baseball League for the greater part of the season and now but a scant half game to the good, must win on Sunday afternoon at Renfrew Park if they wish to retain leadership. The Arrows will meet the up-and-coming Columbus Club and the game will start at 3 o'clock.

The Arrows are out in front just a half game ahead of the second-place Cardinals, therefore they must take a winning edge against the Columbus team Sunday.

Buck Eaton is the probable pitching choice for the Arrows. Eaton has been hurling smart and consistent ball all season. He has proven himself a hard man to beat and with the stakes so high he will be even harder to stop.

RIOTOUS CUMMINGS, BEY BATTLE ENDS IN DRAW

Turk Is No Boxer Ends Bout Rassling

By JACK DEAKIN

Bob "Bad Boy" Cummings was relentless Robert in the main event wrestling bout at the Empire Eheatre last night, continuing his beating of Bairum Bey where he left off last week.

But unlike last Friday, when this robust rassling pair used bare hands, they used boxing gloves for six rounds and finished off the bout wrestling to a draw. The net result of Bob's second straight shellacking of Mr. Bey proved, and definitely so, that there no longer exists the Tough Turkey of a few weeks ago, despite the fact the Turk did not concede defeat.

The fistic flurry between Cummings and Bey was a fitting climax to a supporting card which excelled anything Promoter Mike Cutcher has promoted in many moons.

Newcomers, Soldier Thomas and Dandy "Dizzy" Davis highlighted the supporting card as they proved themselves worthy of every song of praise sung them by wrestling audiences over the length and breadth of the United States.

Wrestling the dynamic Cyclone Mackey in the opening bout, Thomas rated a draw. This pair wrestled at a fast clip for the full 20-minutes. Thomas reminded the fans of Otis Clingman with the only difference between them being that Thomas was faster on his feet and looked smoother in action.

The Mackey and Thomas bout was an even-Stephen affair all the way. Neither gave ground and their matching was perfect for speed, cleverness and size.

Davis' [illegible] of Dandy fitted him perfectly. Dressed in a flowing robe rich with color and quality, Davis stepped [illegible] to his corner of the ring. As the bell sounded Davis took off his robe and neck apparel which consisted of a richly colored silk scarf. Neatly Davis folded his robe, scarf and towel.

With the dignity of a [illegible] he stepped [illegible] to the center of the ring and started wrestling. His opponent was Klem Kusek, an equally able grappler.

Davis won his bout, taking the only fall of the 45-minute bout. He tripped up Kusek with an Indian Deathlock about midway through the joust, but could not pin Kusek for the second fall before the time-limit of 45 minutes had passed.

And then into the ring stepped Cummings and Bey. This pair looked odd with heavy boxing gloves draped over their hands. Cummings looked the best bet as a boxer and went out to prove it as he lashed out with a terrible right hand, his blows missing as often as they hit. The Bey's right and left hands could not land, however. Only with the odd haymaker did the Turk connect, but his glove landed on a chin, which was literally cast-iron.

Soon the Turk's mouth began to bleed as he lost one tooth. Presently it bled more as he lost a couple of teeth. His left eye took on a black color and soon closed completely.

As Bey lost his third teeth and was decidedly in a bad way. At the end of the sixth round the bout was stopped as Bey asked that the boxing be changed to wrestling.

Wrestling and fighting as he has seldom battled before, Cummings gave Bey a real working over in the wrestling, too. He could not, however, dump the Turk for a winning fall and the bell rang to close out one of the roughest mixed battles ever seen here.

Pats Edge Out 9-6 Win In Ladies' Softball Tilt

ARMY and Navy Pats pushed still farther into the lead in the ladies' intermediate baseball league last night as they downed a hard-fighting Black and White team 9-6 at the Boyle Street diamond.

Outhit and outplayed during the entire game, Pats resorted to some of the smartest base running seen in the league this year to chalk up their win. Pats scored nine runs on as many hits and had only two players left on bases. Black and Whites smashed out 12 safe bingles and let a total of 10 runners "die" on the sacks.

The lead changed hands three times last night and the score was tied up twice, once by each club during last night's contest. Renee Frazer crossed the plate with the winning run in the sixth inning, when Minnie Wilson [illegible] on a liner to left field.

DOGS

by P. Hamilton Goodsell

I believe worms are responsible for an even greater annual death rate among dogs than that produced by distemper. Not that worms in themselves are so very dangerous, except when their presence is ignored or undetected, but because well-meant yet ignorant efforts to eradicate them frequently result in ruined health and consequent lowered resistance to ailments, which prove fatal. Most of the worm medicines on the market are excellent provided they are administered strictly as directed. Many people do not realize that all such remedies are, of necessity, very powerful, and should never be used unless needed. That is why I always say that a competent veterinarian should be requested to make a microscopic examination of the feces whenever a dog is believed to have worms. If the parasites are detected, he can prescribe the proper remedy.

In the instructions for dosage accompanying them proprietary medicines cannot take into account the varying contingencies of age, physical condition, etc., so it is next to impossible for the inexperienced layman to treat his dog properly by their aid alone. The examination above suggested is effective with most varieties of worms except the heart worm and [illegible] worm. The [illegible] test of a blood smear, and [illegible] outward [illegible]

It is well to treat puppies for round worms, the commonest, least dangerous variety, at the age of eight months, and then as a precaution, every four months until fourteen or fifteen months old. It is an excellent idea to have a check-up made of your dog's condition once a year. Absolute cleanliness of yards, kennels and bedding will help to prevent the acquisition of worms. Thorough grooming, which keeps the dog clean and free from fleas, will also help to check them as will certain foods such as buttermilk, garlic and raw onions. These prevent the formation of mucus. Fasting is essential before dosing with most vermifuges, and they should never be used except when the bowels are functioning regularly.

Mr. Goodsell will be glad to answer letters about dogs, exclusive of those dealing with sicknesses, if you w[illegible] at Tenacre, White Pla[illegible] York. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelop[illegible]

FRENCH COLONIES

.. popular and interesting group of countries are those colonies, protectorates, etc., of the Republic of France, and to these may be added the various postage issues of France in foreign countries. The following list will prove of assistance to one not having a catalogue:

Alaouites, Algeria, Anjouan (now part of Madagascar), Annam and Tonkin (now part of Indo-China), Benin (now part of Dahomey), Cameroun, Castellorizo (occupied territory), Cochin China (now part of Indo-China), Chad, Dahomey, Diego Saurez (now part of Madagascar), Djibouti (Somali Coast) (now part of Somali Coast), French Congo (dissolved in 1906 into three colonies of Gabon, Middle Congo and Ubangi-Chari; and the territory of Chad), French Guiana, French Guinea, French India, French Oceania, French Soudan (reapportioned in 1899 among Senegal, French Guinea, Ivory Coast, Dahomey, and Senegambia and Niger), Gabon, Grand Comoro Islands (now part of Madagascar), Guadeloupe, Indo-China, Inini, Ivory Coast, Lebanon, Latakia, Madagascar, Martinique, Mauritania, Mayotte (now part of Madagascar), Memel, Middle Congo, Moheli (one of the Comoro Islands, now part of Madagascar), New Caledonia, New Hebrides (Condominium with Great Britain), Niger Territory, Nossi-Be (now part of Madagascar), Obock (now part of Somali Coast), Reunion, Rouad, St. Marie de Madagascar (now part of Madagascar), St. Pierre and Miquelon, Senegal, Senegambia and Niger (in 1904 stamps were replaced by those of Upper Senegal and Niger), Somali Coast, Syria, Tahiti, Togo, Tunis, Ubangi, Ubangi-Chari, Upper Senegal and Niger, Upper Volta, Wallis and Futuna, Zanzibar.

Special stamp issues will be found for French post offices in the following countries:

Alsace and Lorraine, China, Cilicia, Crete, Egypt, Germany, Morocco, Turkish Empire, Rouad and Zanzibar.

In an extensive group like [illegible] there will be found many rarities but in nearly every case, a representation of all countries listed may be made in the collection of stamps of little cost. Several hundred different may be assembled for a comparatively small outlay.

French Colonial issues of more recent years are colorful and attractive in design. "Key types" were used for many early issues: that is, stamps of the one design and with the different names of the colonies separately printed. Contrasted with these, most of the recent issues are pictorials, portraits, etc.

During periods when French currency has been much below par, many dealers bought up quantities of the lower denominations of French Colonial stamps which will be commonly found in collections. The fact of their not having done postal duty does not affect their philatelic interest, of course.

Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy ON VENTRILOQUISM

Do You Want to Become a Ventriloquist?

LESSON NO. 18

Experience teaches that "slow and sure" is the best rule for accomplishment, but as we reviewed our work in "natural" ventriloquism, I could see that Charlie was raring to get to an act featuring human voices.

Since we had secured the distant effect of the vowels and consonants and had acquired the ability to change from the ventriloquial voice to the natural, he felt we had gone far enough to be able to work up an act. However, I explained to the eager little fellow that we had to put some time on "echo" practice before we could get very far.

"Oh come, Bergen," Charlie put in, "you know you're running into a stone wall. You know an echo is a sound that bounces back at you."

I pointed out that what we strive to do would be by quick change from natural to ventriloquial voice and while keeping the same tone quality, give the illusion of a voice in the distance repeating our own in sound. Then to illustrate I tried the word "Hello"—"Hello" my "distant" voice answered without the apparent lapse of a second.

"Hello," Charlie mimicked and his own voice came back. "Hello." "Greetings and salutations," he answered laughingly.

TODAY'S MARKETS

Toronto—Mines

TORONTO, July 30—Traders were inclined to avoid the buying side on the Toronto exchange, presumably in view of the shutdown Monday for the Civic holiday, and volume fell off sharply. Nevertheless the price tone maintained a firm note, especially in the golds and industrials.

Preston East Dome started with an overnight gain of 10 cents at $1.70, but profit-taking was encountered and the quotation backed down to $1.60. The close was around $1.67, up 7 cents.

East Malartic stepped along to a new high at $2.30, up 11 cents and the close was up 10 cents for Kerr-Addison. Pamour firmed about 20 cents and gains of a few cents appeared for Pickle Crow, O'Brien, Central Patricia and Uchi. Lake Shore firmed ⅛. Waite-Amulet firmed narrowly.

The commission, replacing the coal mines reorganization commission established in 1930, is set up under the scheme for nationalization of the country's vast coal resources, which will be accomplished in four years through government legislation passed by parliament at the session which adjourned Friday for the summer recess.

The commission will not engage in coal mining itself, but will issue leases to companies which will work the mines. Its personnel was announced as follows:

Sir Ernest Gowers, chairman; Geo. Ponsonby, vice-chairman; Sir Felix Pole, William Codrington and Jas. Jones.

RIOTS CONTINUE IN BURMA, FOUR MORE ARE KILLED

RANGOON, Burma, July 30. — Military police opened fire on rioting mobs in four parts of Rangoon last night, killing four persons and wounding 16 in efforts to quell clashes between Moslems and Buddhists.

In four days of fighting through barricaded streets 50 persons have been killed and 350 injured.

Spain Loyalist Army Clinging Close To Gandesa

HENDAYE, France, July 30.—The Spanish Government "people's army" clung close to Gandesa today despite counter-attacks by land and air and a man-made flood in the Ebro river valley designed to sever supply lines and cut off retreat.

Government forces withstood severe counter-thrusts and the pounding of bombs to consolidate earlier gains in their five-day offensive in South Catalonia.

Barcelona despatches belittled the strategy of the Insurgents in opening all dams on the Noguera Pallaresa and Segre rivers, northern tributaries of the Ebro, insisting the flood hurt General Franco's forces more than the Government's.

Revolt Against Greek Dictator Quickly Crushed

ATHENS, July 30. — A revolt against the regime of General John Metaxas, dictator of Greece, apparently was quickly crushed Friday.

The governor of the Island of Crete, where the uprising broke out, cabled Metaxas that order had been restored in Canea, the capital.

All rebel-held government buildings have been reoccupied by authorities he reported, and the revolutionists have fled.

The Power and the Kingdom and the Glory - - - By Achmed Abdullah

OF the pagoda on the other side of the Nan Hai road, Yi Jung saw nothing, day in and day out, except the roof that lifted itself toward the sky in an exquisite curve, then dropped to a porcelain frieze, blue as summer waters.

The roof was made of black tiles faintly dusted with gold. Yi Jung knew every one of the tiles. He had given them small, endearing names.

There was one, for instance which he called "Tun—Generous," other entitled respectively "Tuan Orthodox," "Fu — Trustworthy," and "Cheng—Sedate," and one, a little larger than the rest and holding a stronger infusion of gold beneath its opaque surface, he had named "Kung Yu—Blessed and Prosperous."

This title he treated with a great deal of reverential respect. He addressed prayers to it. He saved for it a daily offering of a few grains of rice from his midday meal which he threw on the ground and which the sparrows stole at night, after he had gone to bed.

But he did not know this. He believed that Kung Yu, the deity of the tile due to the imagery of his appointing, accepted the offerings and would count them to his credit when he implored it to help him, to intercede in his behalf with sweet, violet-faced Kwan-in, the goddess of mercy, standing snowy-footed upon the heart of her golden lily, to grant him freedom from his sufferings.

For he was a crippled and helpless child, whose parents were dead, and his uncle, who took care of him after a fashion, was a poor river coolie with nine children of his own.

Yi Jung could not see the pagoda itself, knew nothing of the little room, in back of the great statue of the Buddha, where men would gather at night and—in fear of the Dowager Empress in far Pekin and her leaky-tongued Tartar spies—would speak in whispers.

Whispers about revolution—and freedom.

At other times, more reckless, there would be mumbling about this same freedom, staccato, minatory, in the Nan Hai road, when the blue-bloused coolies returned from their labor, walking in single file, talking over furtive shoulders.

Or during the Festival of Ascending Heights when the very old men told tales which their great-grandfathers had heard from their great-grandfathers, of the golden days of Han and Sung and Ming, before the iron-capped riders of the north had trampled China into the dust.

Or out on the river's slimy banks where Yi Jung's uncle worked and where certain Chinese youths, come back from American universities, spoke grandiosly about the fist of lusty, young democracy brushing away the Bourbon cobwebs of Manchu and Mandarin.

YI JUNG'S VISION BARRED

The Cantonese shook their heads at the strange synonyms. They understood little about democracy. But they understood what freedom meant. It meant a full stomach and lower taxes. It meant—perhaps—a modicum of happiness.

But Yi Jung knew nothing of all this, heard and saw nothing of all this. He saw only the pagoda roof. For, below it, his vision was barred by the ugly mass of the three coolie houses that poured the acrid scent of their back doors into the courtyard, left, right, and in front of him.

At his back was his uncle's wattle-and-daub dwelling forming, with the other three, a grimy square, strong with the warm reek of grease and offal, heaped with the squishy refuse of four Canton families.

Here then he lived, from six in the morning until six at night, when his two eldest cousins, Yi Hsu and Yi Lien, carried him back into the house where he slept in a little room, on a brick platform side by side with his uncle, his aunt, and their nine sons. During the twelve hours of day he never moved from the box which Kuei Ching, the carpenter, had made for him. It had a sort of half roof to protect him against the sun and the rain, and it was narrow and high-walled, so that he could not fall out.

For he was paralyzed from the hips down. His useless, withered legs were covered with rags. He was now nine years of age—and he could remember his little kingdom for nearly nine eternities.

Not that there was much to remember, except the dull, throbbing monotony of his sufferings, and the bitter abuse which his family heaped upon his head. Of course they took care of him. They gave him this box, rice, clothing and a place at night on the brick platform. But they were poor. They counted each grain of rice and each motley rag because they had to.

It was proper—they thought—to feed and clothe a helpless cripple. One gained face thereby. But what particular face-gaining was there in a kindly word, in sympathy?

Sympathy was the luxury of the rich, and these people were poor with the blighting, crushing poverty of China which, from the hour of birth to the hour of death, never knows the decency of a full stomach and of clean, unpatched garments, which is never more than half a leap ahead of actual starvation.

"When one is eating one's own, one does not eat to repletion," Yi Ng, Yi Jung's uncle, said to him one day when he asked for a second helping of rice. "When one is eating another's, one eats till the tears run."

And Su-fen La, his aunt, chimed in with:

"Perhaps plain rice is not good enough for His Highness, the Yellow Emperor! Perhaps His Highness' delicate stomach demands oil and spices, like a jade-button mandarin . . ."

TAUNTS OF HIS COUSINS

He did not reply.

Nor did he reply, ever, to his cousins' coarse jests when tired and discouraged, starving for food yet knowing that they would get just enough to dull the merest edge of hunger, they returned from their toil.

For they all worked, from sixteen-year-old Yi Hsu who was already a full fledged coolie, to little seven-year-old Yi K'u who helped Kuei Ching, the carpenter, and, being Mongols, they thought that he who cannot earn his rice should die and that, if he does not die, he cheats the living thereby.

So they told him, frankly, brutally. Yet it would be ludicrous and lying hunting after sentimental effect to say that such remarks touched Yi Jung either morally or ethically.

He felt that his family was right in their treatment of him. He knew that he would have done likewise had the position been reversed. Yet this knowledge did not soften the monotony of his sufferings—which were his life.

There were no changes.

The fabric of his childish fancy, woven of the mean and meager stuff that lay within his narrow horizon, provided the only interest in his poor, cramped life.

Above his head, occasionally, a long streamer of wild parrots, tumbled out of their southern homes by the sweep of the typhoon, would alight on the pagoda roof, flopping about the tiles and screeching dismally, their motley finery of feathers bedraggled with moisture.

He watched them, the scout bird detaching itself, flying down, then up, resting momentarily immobile on stiffly extended pinions, dipping, flanking the frightened crowd of its comrades in long, graceful evolutions, then suddenly soaring, triumphant, leading the flock away—west—to freedom . . .

Freedom—Yi Jung's stammering thoughts whirred on the parrots' wings—freedom from suffering.

"Grant me freedom from suffering!" came his prayer to Kung Yu, deity of the tile. "Intercede in my behalf with Kwan-in, the sweet goddess of mercy!"

Then, turning his head at the sound of low laughter, he saw Yi Fu-Keng, his fourth cousin, who stood there, listening and watching with sardonic mirth.

"Hayah!" exclaimed Yi Fu-Keng as he beheld the crippled child trying to kowtow in unison with his prayer. "A hunchback bowing! What exaggeration . . ."

OPIUM INSPIRED DEFIANCE

Yi Jung's kingdom was indeed mean and small. Not even a change until, one day, two gray-robed priests came into the courtyard and asked for alms, received them.

For how can one not give alms to the Buddha's elect?

Yet Yi Ng, who earlier in the day had smoked three opium pellets, eyed them with defiance, the drug imparting high-pitched belligerence to his accents.

"Soon," he cried, "we will have no more use for priests, nor for mandarins, nor for Manchus. There will be the coming of freedom. They are fighting for it in the South. A man of strength and justice has risen there. The ricepaddies are red with blood. Soon there will be freedom too, in this city of Canton . . ." and he extended a hand, aimed it at the two like a pistol.

"There is freedom—always—in the mind of the seeker," said one priest, lean and white-haired, and there was in his voice the blurred quality of the very old, the very wise and patient and kindly.

"Death to tyrants!"

"There is freedom—always—in the ultimate sending of fate. Freedom beyond fetters of rope and wood and fetters of iron—freedom beyond the fetters of the body."

"There is freedom only in the doing——" said Yi Ng stubbornly—"only in the fist!"

"Eh . . .?" The voice of the second priest, who was fat and butter-yellow, with full, red lips and thin-lidded eyes, carried a threatening purr. "There is no freedom at all for Cantonese mudturtles with wagging tongues. For such there is only the Dowager Empress' wrath and the twist and jerk of the hangman's noose."

At once the light of exaltation vanished from the coolie's eyes. The opium in his brain died out, leaving it brittle and vacant and frightened. He kowtowed deeply, sucking in his breath.

"Heaven-Born!" he implored. "Be pleased not to have heard. I said nothing—nothing!"

"Then continue to say nothing—nothing!" rejoined the other. "For remember — the tongue has no bones, but it crushes—crushes those of loose and foolish speech."

The older priest smiled at Yi Ng.

"Do not fear," he said. "No harm has been done. But do not forget. There is freedom—always—in the ultimate sending of fate."

Yi Jung had been listening. He looked up, over the rim of the box.

"Always?" he demanded.

"Yes, little brother," replied the kindly priest.

"Freedom—you said—for the body, too?"

"Indeed."

"My body—hurts."

"Some day it will no longer hurt."

"Then I'll be happy."

"Indeed, little brother . . ."

The latter was still frightened. His hands trembled. But presently he bent forward and stood rigid, like a pointer at bay, as from beyond the Chu Kong River, gradually and very slowly, a maze of dull-booming vibrations drifted across and filled the air. They seemed to span a great distance.

It was impossible to tell if they were the echoing resonance of human voices or of instruments. They were just droning waves ascending and descending, pitched in broken, sighing, quarter and eighth notes, and there was about them an unearthly quality, cosmic, like the meaning of a world in struggle of birth or death . . .

Spellbound, Yi Jung watched his uncle.

The man stood motionless, his brown, skinny fists doubled tight.

Suddenly, the tone vibrations snapped off, in mid-air. Came a second or two of clogging silence. Then, as suddenly, a single note stabbed out, immense, brazen, defiant, the bull-like roar of a Chinese war trumpet, and at the sound, a smile came on Yi Ng's face which straightened the fleshy curve of his lips to a wolfish snarl.

"Hah . . ." he breathed the one syllable, repeated it as, again across the distance, drifted the maze of eerie tone waves.

"Hah . . ."

The sounds seemed a little nearer. Muffled, dim beatings and throbbings like a brooding message of strife and, ever and again, the bull-like roar of the war trumpets.

Utterly fascinated Yi Jung watched and listened. He forgot momentarily the sufferings of his body, forgot the drag and smother of his unhappiness. Something romantic, something exciting was in the atmosphere and his child's soul sensed it, loved it, rose to it eagerly.

His uncle's body swayed forward. His whole attitude expressed intense expectation. He raised a hand and pointed as Yi Hsu, his first-born, came into the courtyard and asked what was happening.

"You hear?" said Yi Ng.

"Yes, father. It is . . .?"

"It will be—soon. Tonight we will sacrifice to Fu Hsi, the god of war. Perhaps of all the accursed and powerless deities, he is the only one who . . ."

"Yes, yes."

That evening, after they had stretched themselves on the brick platform, Yi Ng and his three oldest sons talked long in gliding undertones, until Su-fen La stopped them with a harsh:

"Enough! The night is for the sleep of the sleepers—not for the babble of the babblers!"

So, presently, there was snoring and heavy breathing. Only Yi Jung did not close his eyes. Outside, the dull-booming tone vibrations had ceased. But to the child the atmosphere seemed viscous and sludgy.

There was fear in it and, strangely, too, a great, golden hope, and he thought—he did not know why—of what the white-haired priest had said to him:

"Some day it will no longer hurt . . ."

FREEDOM RAISES BANNERS

Morning came.

Again spanning the distance, throbbed and beat the muffled tone waves, nearer and ever nearer, grim portentous stabbed at quicker, sharper intervals by the war trumpets' roar.

Outside, on the Nan Hai road beyond the pagoda roof, some enormous elation seemed to spread through the crowds of coolies who hurried to their work, something pulsing with a high message which swept through the length and breadth of Canton—and the little cripple felt it, too.

He grew prey to a huge, voiceless excitement. His eyes flashed. His weak hands trembled, and his uncle, going about his sketchy morning ablutions, looked at him and laughed.

"Ho!" he said. "It seems that even the cripples and the useless are dreaming of freedom."

"Freedom!" thought Yi Jung when his cousins had carried him into the courtyard. "Freedom . . ."

And he looked up at the pagoda roof, at Kung Yu, the slightly larger tile, which so often, he implored to intercede for him with the sweet goddess of mercy.

Freedom . . .

"DEATH TO ALL TYRANTS"

It had come suddenly, over night almost, crashing like an iron fist into the teeth of Manchu and Tartar satraps.

It had started in the far south of China with a tense, dramatic whisper that changed, in twenty-four hours, to a savage, clarion call of triumph as the black-turbaned Moslem braves of Kan-suh and the blue-bloused coolies of Kwang-si and Kwei-chau gathered strength and impetus like an avalanche, trampled across the fields and the ricepaddies, and swept the outlying garrisons of the Dowager Empress into oblivion.

It came relentless, disdainful as freedom always does, hurling the dragon-standards of the northern conquerors into the dirt. On it came the rolling boundlessness of an enslaved people's hate and hope, bruiting afar the thunder word of an ancient race.

It came into the lives of millions of yellow men as an answer to a prayer and into the life of Yi Jung, it came with a sharpening of his sufferings, with loneliness and hunger.

At first, indeed, he had enjoyed the excitement that was in the air, the keen edges of romance that flashed through the drab of his existence. Fear he had felt, but a fear which held, somehow, the tang of ultimate hope.

Now it was noon. It was the hour when his uncle and his cousins returned from work, when they plied their chop-sticks and gave him rice and tea and a grudging measure of service. And today there was no smell of cooking. Even his aunt had left. He was alone. He was hungry and thirsty and helpless.

The sun rode high. Its rays burned him, blinded him. There was nobody to move his box. Flies buzzed about him. A puff of wind filled his throat with choking dust.

And that, too, had he known, was part of the wages of freedom.

For it had struck Canton like a whirlwind. The night before there had been whispering, also nervousness, since there were always the Empress' spies and red-robed executioners. There had been, furthermore, a chance that the oncoming, revolutionary hordes might be beaten back by the imperial banner-corps.

Then morning had wakened to the news that revolution was a fact, a successful fact, crimson-stained, irrevocable, with the men of Kan-suh and Kwang-si pouring in, armed with rifles and swords. The liberators had come.

The Tartar garrison was dead or in flight, and now the Jaganath of revenge was in full motion. Crushingly, pitilessly, its wheel moved, crushing Manchus and mandarins beneath its weight, taking them from palace and temple and official residence, torturing, killing.

And so the men and women of Canton came swinging through the torturous streets, like a blue-and-yellow snake with unnumerable bobbing heads. They met, converged, circled, spread, met again, swept on, and always there was the killing and the shrieking.

And amongst them marched Yi Ng and his sons, from the oldest who was sixteen to the youngest who was sixteen to the youngest with the best of them the grim war cry: "Death to the tyrants!" and even Su-fen La, like a woman of the French revolution, was keeping step, hanging on to the arm of a huge Kan-suh brave who, with his other hand, carried high a pole on which was impaled the grimacing head of the governor of the province and beneath it, a placard with three Chinese characters that read simply:

"Wo pu shih—behold! I am no more . . ."

GOES OUT INTO STREET

From where he sat in his box Yi Jung heard the noise of the multitude, a giant heaving of energy bursting into sound—a sound that sublimated the savage soul of China into something nearly magnificent.

But this he did not know. He would not have cared had he been able to know. For, he was taken up with the selfishness of his own unhappiness.

There was chiefly the hunger and the thirst. Used to little, he missed that little very much. And he felt the heat beating into his brain like a mass of jagged, molten brass. For the first time in his life he was conscious of pain in his paralyzed legs.

It made him cry. He looked up at the pagoda roof. He implored Kung Yu, the deity of the tile, to help him.

Then he must have had a fainting spell. For little black spots swam in front of his eyes. The pagoda roof seemed to heave and totter. There was a period of delirium—and then a sudden awakening.

It now seemed cooler. Afternoon had come with darkening, dove-gray clouds that hid the sun. There was still the noise drifting in from beyond the pagoda roof. He sensed more than heard the mob thronging down the Nan Hai road to the Ocean Banner Monastery where a handful of Tartar soldiers were making their last, desperate stand.

And, for the first time he could remember, Yi Jung became aware, less of the sufferings of his body than of the physical limitations which it implied. He felt no longer the hunger and the thirst. He felt within him, on the contrary, a great and vital energy.

And he tried to rise.

He sobbed:

"Sweet goddess of mercy, help me!"

He strained, strained, his hands gripping the edges of the box, tearing, jerking, pushing, bracing himself with a terrible effort, his face red and perspiring, his temples throbbing. For he wanted to see the crowds, to march with them and feel with them, to join them, to join them in their exultant shout:

"Pao Ching Mien Yang, an end to oppression and honorable loyalty to China!"

He did not know why. His body had never been beyond the narrow courtyard, his mind beyond the rice bowl and the pagoda roof. He had no knowledge of China, her history, her ambitions and problems.

He only knew that the desire to join the clamoring, hectic throng was deep within him, tugging at his heartstrings . . . and again he strained, strained his weak hands clawing at the edges of the box, his withered legs dragging in the nest of rags that covered them . . . and he sobbed:

"Help me! Help me, sweet goddess of mercy!"

Power he needed. Power of muscle and tendon . . .

"Grant me power, sweet goddess of mercy!"

And then, on the ground by the side of the box he saw a [illegible] stout stick which Kuei Ching, the carpenter, must have dropped. His weak hands reached down, picked it up and with all his pitiful puny strength he used it as a boatman on the Chu Kong River uses a long pole, pushing it against the bank and propelling his craft.

And he too pushed, straining, heaving, jerking, and at last the box bumped into motion, slowly along the [illegible] uneven courtyard . . . across the outer threshold into the street.

TRAMPLED BENEATH THRONG

Here then, for the first time in his life, Yi Jung saw the outside world, and he saw no houses, no trees, not even the sky.

Looking up from his box, straining his eyes as he stretched his neck, he saw only a thick ever-shifting wall of [illegible] tossed about him like a maelstrom, men and women, yelling, shrieking, carrying weapons and placards on poles. He was not afraid. There was again in his heart the golden hope; he remembered again the old priest's words:

"Some day it will no longer hurt."

Steadily the crowd gathered strength, impetus, a tearing, brutal sweep. From all sides coolies crowded, shaking clubs and rifles and naked blades, picking up bricks and stones. For word had drifted through that the Ocean Banner Monastery, the last stronghold of Manchu tyranny, was still holding out.

A mob. A raging mob with but one thought, one mania . . .

"On to the Ocean Banner Monastery!"

"On to freedom!"

"Freedom!" yelled a six-foot coolie, [illegible] coming down the [illegible].

"Freedom!" [illegible] a [illegible] old woman, hobbling along [illegible] on bound feet.

"Freedom!" the shout was taken up like the response in a litany.

"Freedom!" echoed the crippled child's small, cracked voice as the mob swept about him, as feet here and there kicked against the box, rocking it, nearly upsetting it.

He did not care. A great, sensual exaltation quivered through his body, down [illegible] paralyzed legs, electrifying him with an incredible, trembling elation.

"Freedom!" he cried defiantly.

The mob surged on. The afternoon [illegible] dropped lower. A storm came [illegible] from the north, [illegible] the street with a whipping wedge of hailstones that rattled like machine gun bullets. Lightning zigzagged. Rain fell [illegible]. And the crowd did not feel it, did not care.

"Freedom!" he cried, his feeble hands beating the edges of the rocking box with a staccato measure.

Happiness in his voice.

Happiness in his heart!

The mob was all around him. Nobody saw him. Nobody paid any attention to him. They swirled about him like a wave of the sea, they like the sea itself. His heart was beating with rapid, fierce strokes.

A careless foot sent the box spinning. Still he was not afraid. He thought that somewhere, somehow, there was peace in this blue-bloused hysterical whirlpool, peace and freedom and an end to suffering.

And the crowd surged about him, surged, surged immensely. And suddenly it seemed to him as if he sank into a cushion of air—and he felt pain, but it was, so queerly, a soft, pleasant pain—and the pain ceased and it seemed as if great arms, strong and tender, were about him, like the arms of a mother, hugging him tight, so tight that he could not breathe, that he could hardly think beneath their tremendous pressure of love . . .

FOUND KINGDOM AND GLORY

"Freedom!" once again the crippled child's voice from beneath the trampling feet.

"Freedom!" once more, so very low and faint, and he lay there, trampled by the trampling cruel feet, his spirit winging up and away from his crushed, lifeless body, up toward God, and among all those thousands that celebrated the coming of freedom he was the only one who had found it—had found the power and the kingdom and the glory . . .

CAST OF CHARACTERS

NIKKI JEROME—heroine, [illegible] engaged to six foot black [illegible].

STEVE MALLORY, hero, who is accompanying her on a trip to Nikki's aunt and uncle on a Wyoming dude ranch. Nikki's fiance.

PETER JEROME—[illegible] wealthy New York jewel merchant.

Yesterday: Nikki and her uncle and Steve are to take a mountain trip and Sarto, Bancroft and Fiske decide to go too.

CHAPTER VII

THEY took the trail just as the sun broke at dawn and sent its first warming rays into the mist that formed a soft, white cloak over the hills toward which they rode in pairs, conversing and adjusting their bodies to the gaits of the fast-walking animals.

Nikki rode with Steve and realized, in the grandeur of the breaking dawn, that she loved this man very much and that she was being distinctly unfair to him. Anything might happen on this trip, she thought, and decided to tell Steve about Bancroft and the money at the first opportunity. In the meantime she rode beside him in silence and told him with her eyes that she loved him greatly.

Long before they stopped to eat the sandwiches that had been prepared and to boil coffee over a tiny fire, the trail started upward and became more and more rocky. Once they crossed a dry river bed that was a tremendous trail of boulders walled in on either side by cliffs along which the seams and formations traced irregular patterns.

Their pause for lunch was brief, for Uncle Jim wanted to reach the cabin before dark and the worst of the trail lay yet ahead. As they started out again he arranged them in single file and warned each rider against trying to pass another or of getting too close on the trail.

Rance led the way, followed by Nikki, Uncle Jim, Fiske, Sarto, Steve, Bancroft, and Woods, who brought up the rear to keep any of the little party from straggling too far back.

The trip appeared to be a hardship for Sarto alone. He was distinctly not an outdoor man and nature to him meant taking a taxi through Central Park when it was the shortest route to his destination. He clung to his saddle as the trail narrowed and hunched disconsolately in his seat, scowling silently. The pack trip was obviously not of his choosing.

The trail wound along the side of a cliff, tortuous and rocky. On the inside rose the sheer walls of stone washed clean by centuries of mountain storms, marked with the oddly colored lines of capricious reds and blacks against the brown. On the other side, along most of the slender path, the mountain sloped off steeply but not dangerously. A daring horseman could have ridden down the side had he chosen. It was dotted with clumps of low-growing bushes and trees that clustered courageously in the soil around the boulders.

But in spots the violent torrents of the spring thaws had burst over the trail and rushed down the mountain side in foaming white cascades, stripping the slope of its bushes, stunted trees and boulders, transforming the decline into a sudden, breath-taking drop that might be 50 or might be 200 feet straight down before the break ended in a rough bed of granite.

They had been on that upward trail several hours when it happened. Nikki was watching her horse stepping carefully at the heels of Rance's mount. Behind her Uncle Jim hummed a monotonous little song and paid small attention to a trail that was long familiar to him.

Behind her uncle came Fiske, quiet and observant, and back of him rode the glowering Sarto. They were passing one of the sections of the trail narrowed by the snow-laden torrents and the path hung precipitously over a world of nothingness on the right. There wasn't over 20 feet of danger and then the trail widened and fell off into gradual sloping ground again.

Nikki heard a sudden frightened gasp and turned to see Sarto's horse plunging forward, tugging the reins, and Sarto clung to the pommel, his head ducked forward into the steed's mane.

The quick lunge carried Sarto's horse, crowding between the wall and the mare ridden by Fiske. The mare fought desperately for balance. Her [illegible] hoofs struck sparks as she slipped on the edge of the trail.

"Throw yourself off!" shouted Uncle Jim, twisting in his saddle, helpless to aid.

There was only an instant as the mare hung on the brink. Fiske leaned desperately to throw his weight inward. Sarto's horse surged forward again in frightened leaps and broke through.

Steve, riding directly behind Sarto, reined in his horse abruptly at Sarto's unexpected lunge. He could see the quick, deadly drop off the trail, the narrow path upon which two horses could not stand side by side. He could see just ahead the safety of the sloping mountain with its dotting shrubs and small trees.

That safety lay a bare ten feet ahead of Fiske.

The final plunge of Sarto's horse forced Fiske's mare far out on the edge. One hind foot slipped [illegible] and pawed into the empty air. She fought and lost the battle for balance.

Then Steve moved. With the saddle [illegible], he turned his horse to the outside of the trail. He leaned forward and brought the flat hand down brutally hard on his mount's rump.

His horse bounded forward and struck Fiske's mare almost as she slipped off the trail. The momentum of the blow carried the mare forward and in. She was safe. So was Fiske. But the motion threw Steve's horse to the outer edge, fighting for footing on the last few feet of the trail which overhung the precipice.

Steve lost his balance and plunged over his mount's shoulder as the force of the fall carried him past the precipice. He grabbed a clump of bushes as he slipped downward and clung on desperately. His horse scrambled forward, lost its footing, rolled over twice and finally stopped against a tree, got up and shook itself [illegible].

Uncle Jim was off his horse by that time with a rope in his hand. He tossed the noose down to Steve, snubbed the other end around his saddle horn.

"Slip it over your arms," he shouted, and Steve managed to find footing long enough to get the noose over his head and shoulders. Rance and Uncle Jim hauled him back up.

Sarto still sat his horse sullenly. Fiske was leaning against the wall. He came over to give Steve the final helping hand back up on the trail.

"Thanks," he said, and his voice meant it.

"That was mighty quick thinking," said Uncle Jim.

"Mighty quick acting, too," said Rance.

Nikki was standing back, her face white, and she couldn't get over the feeling that her knees weren't going to support her much longer. Steve came over and she clung to him.

"You're all right now," he told her and laughed gently.

"I know you are now," she said, "but you weren't a minute ago and you might have been killed. Oh, Steve!"

War Memories Revived as Vets Muster in Toronto

TORONTO, July 30.—Toronto became a city of memories today as close to 75,000 war veterans assembled for the second Canadian Corps reunion.

The words, "I remember," and "Don't you remember" were heard everywhere as old comrades got together to renew acquaintances interrupted by 20 years of peace.

There were memories of happy days in blighty, merry times in camp and canteen, grim days and nights when shot and shell flew overhead and the earth rumbled beneath. There were sad memories of men who did not come back.

Memories brought these men together from all parts of Canada and many parts of the United States and memories will cheer and thrill them during the three days of the reunion.

Today they returned, 20 years older, many grey-haired, with stouter bodies and a little stoop in the shoulders, some bearing the wounds and scars of war, to taste military life again.

Dilly-Dallying No Place In Life Says Centurian

COMREY, July 30—For 15 years on her birthday Mrs. Sira Quattum, who came to Canada from Norway many years ago, has told many relatives: "Well, this will be my last one."

But now she isn't sure. "Grandma" Quattum is preparing to celebrate her 101st birthday with a party next Monday. There will be 101 candles on the cake.

Believed to be Alberta's oldest woman, she is still active, interested in family and town affairs.

She likes "modern things" and particularly enjoys motoring, visiting the homes of her five children and many grand-children and great-grandchildren.

And she has advice for those who have reached the century mark.

"After 100, no one has time for dilly-dallying around," she declares.

Little Orphan Annie
HIS FOOT SMASHED IN A MINOR MISHAP, ACE IS UNABLE TO CARRY ON AS A HANDY MAN ON THE LOT, SO JACK HAS PROMOTED HIM, PLACING HIM IN THE OFFICE IN FULL CHARGE OF THE BOOKS, PAYROLL AND THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS IN CASH-
WHY DID HE DO IT? TRYING TO TRAP ME? HE SAID HE HAD NO RECORD AND NO IDEA HOW MUCH CASH WAS IN THIS BOX- I WAS SURE IT WAS A TRICK-
BUT AFTER CHECKING THE BOOKS I DON'T SEE HOW HE COULD TELL, UNLESS HE'D JUST COUNTED IT- WHAT A SYSTEM- NO SYSTEM HERE AT ALL-
AND RECEIPTS SINCE HE'S BEEN AWAY- NO WAY FOR HIM TO CHECK ON THOSE- WHY, HE'D NEVER MISS FIVE HUNDRED- THE FOOL! HE DESERVES TO BE ROBBED-
WHY, I COULD TAKE A THOUSAND, EASY AS NOT--- EH? WHAT DO YOU WANT HERE?
HELLO, ACE- ROSE SENT YER LUNCH OVER- I'LL SET IT HERE- I'VE GOTTA GET BACK-
COULD THAT GUY REALLY HAVE TRUSTED ME? HE COULDN'T BE THAT BIG A SAP—NOBODY IS THAT FOOLISH- STILL--- I WONDER-
THOUSANDS O' DOLLARS AND ACE COUNTIN' IT, AND HANDLIN' IT- ALL ALONE- NOBODY WATCHIN' HIM- I TELL YUH, SOME OF IT'S BOUND TO STICK TO HIS FINGERS-
YOU'RE TOO YOUNG TO BE SO CYNICAL AND SUSPICIOUS, ANNIE-
BUT WE ALL KNOW TH' GUY'LL STEAL- HAS JACK GONE PLUMB CRAZY TO TEMPT ACE THAT WAY?
HA! HA! I IMAGINE JACK'S SMARTER THAN YOU THINK — OR THAN EVEN ACE SUSPECTS-YUH MEAN--? YUH MEAN JACK'S SET A TRAP TO CATCH ACE STEALIN'?
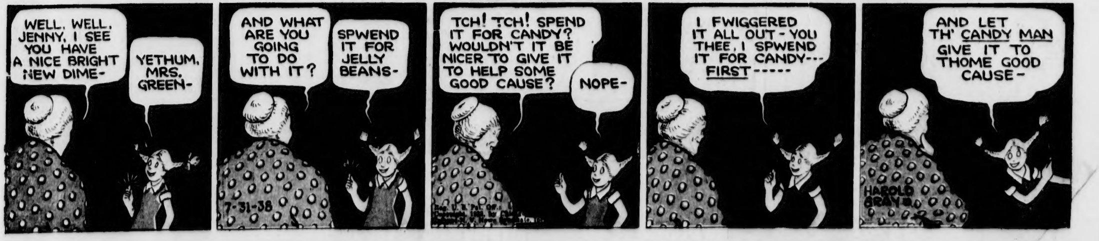
NO! JACK'S TOO BIG FOR THAT- HE'S REALLY A BIGGER GAMBLER THAN ACE- JACK PLAYS FOR HUMAN STAKES- HE'S BETTING HE CAN MAKE ACE INTO A MAN-
IT TAKES THE RIGHT STUFF AND CAREFUL TEMPERING TO PRODUCE STEEL...OR MEN- JACK'S PUT STRONG TEMPTATION IN ACE'S WAY- IF HE RESISTS, HE'S GOT GOOD STUFF-
7-31-38
AGAIN AND AGAIN AND AGAIN- HE'LL BE TEMPTED- EACH TIME HE RESISTS, HE GETS STRONGER- IF HE DOESN'T RESIST? WELL- JACK WILL HAVE LOST ONLY A LITTLE MONEY-
GEE! I HOPE IT WORKS OUT RIGHT-
OR I COULD TAKE IT ALL- AND LAM- HE'D BE GLAD TO GET RID OF ME-- NO! I'LL NOT TAKE A DIME OF IT- NOT A DIME! (NOT NOW, ANYWAY-)

Maw Green



WELL, WELL, JENNY, I SEE YOU HAVE A NICE BRIGHT NEW DIME-
YETHUM, MRS. GREEN-
AND WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO WITH IT?
SPWEND IT FOR JELLY BEANS-
7-31-38
TCH! TCH! SPEND IT FOR CANDY? WOULDN'T IT BE NICER TO GIVE IT TO HELP SOME GOOD CAUSE?
NOPE-
I FWIGGERED IT ALL OUT- YOU THEE, I SPWEND IT FOR CANDY--- FIRST-----
AND LET TH' CANDY MAN GIVE IT TO THOME GOOD CAUSE-

OUT OUR WAY The Willets By Williams

KINDA LOOKS LIKE A PAGE FROM A LOVE LETTER

"MY ONLIEST PIDGY WIDGY"-GOSH, I'D NEVER WRITE THAT TO A GIRL-- I'D BE SCAIRT SHE'D THINK I WAS A SAP!
ANY GIRL WHO WOULD SWALLOW THAT STUFF IS AS BIG A SAP AS TH' GUY WHO WROTE IT WHAT DO YOU WANT ME TO READ THIS FOR?

I'D LIKE TO SEE TH' GUY WHO WROTE THAT... I'LL BET HE'S CRACKED
WHERE'S THE REST OF IT? THIS IS ONLY HALF A PAGE
THE OTHER HALF IS OVER THERE, JUST OFFA OUR LOT
IT'S FUNNY AS TH' DICKENS--WHY DIDN'T YOU GET IT ALL?
WHY, I AIN'T CLEANIN' UP NEIGHBORS' YARDS... I TORE OFF TH' HALF THAT WAS ON OUR SIDE, AND A LITTLE MORE WELL, IF THAT ISN'T TH' HEIGHT OF LAZINESS!

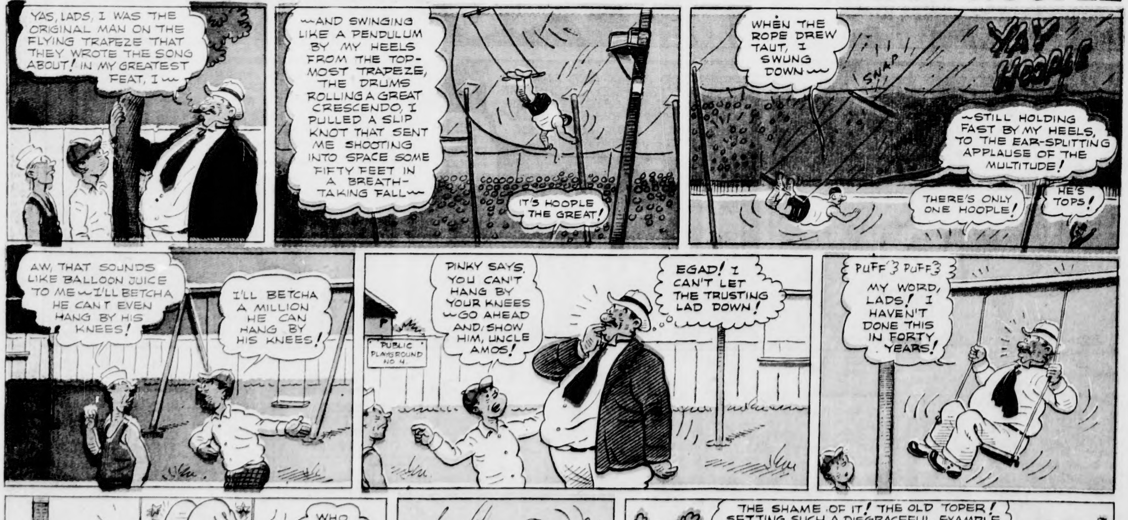
OUR BOARDING HOUSE MAJOR HOOPLE



YAS, LADS, I WAS THE ORIGINAL MAN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE THAT THEY WROTE THE SONG ABOUT! IN MY GREATEST FEAT, I~
~AND SWINGING LIKE A PENDULUM BY MY HEELS FROM THE TOP-MOST TRAPEZE, THE DRUMS ROLLING A GREAT CRESCENDO, I PULLED A SLIP KNOT THAT SENT ME SHOOTING INTO SPACE SOME FIFTY FEET IN A BREATH-TAKING FALL~
IT'S HOOPLE THE GREAT!
WHEN THE ROPE DREW TAUT, I SWUNG DOWN~
SNAP
~STILL HOLDING FAST BY MY HEELS, TO THE EAR-SPLITTING APPLAUSE OF THE MULTITUDE!
THERE'S ONLY ONE HOOPLE!
HE'S TOPS!
AW, THAT SOUNDS LIKE BALLOON JUICE TO ME~I'LL BETCHA HE CAN'T EVEN HANG BY HIS KNEES!
I'LL BETCHA A MILLION HE CAN HANG BY HIS KNEES!
PUBLIC PLAYGROUND NO. 4
PINKY SAYS YOU CAN'T HANG BY YOUR KNEES ~GO AHEAD AND SHOW HIM, UNCLE AMOS!
EGAD! I CAN'T LET THE TRUSTING LAD DOWN!
PUFF PUFF
MY WORD, LADS! I HAVEN'T DONE THIS IN FORTY YEARS!
WHO SAID HE COULDN'T DO IT?
THE SHAME OF IT! THE OLD TOPER! SETTING SUCH A DISGRACEFUL EXAMPLE FOR THOSE INNOCENT BOYS!

THIS CURIOUS WORLD
REGENERATION..
IF MAN LOSES AN ARM, OR A LEG, HE MUST LIVE WITHOUT IT THE REST OF HIS LIFE! BUT MANY OF THE SO-CALLED LOWER ANIMALS ARE ABLE TO REPLACE LOST PARTS.
IF A STARFISH IS TORN IN HALVES, EACH HALF DEVELOPS INTO A WHOLE NEW INDIVIDUAL.
by William Ferguson
THE BEST KNOWN EXAMPLE IS THE LIZARD! IF HARD PRESSED BY A PURSUER, THE TAIL DROPS OFF AND DISTRACTS THE ONCOMING ENEMY, WHILE THE REST OF THE LIZARD ESCAPES ... AND GROWS A NEW TAIL.
AN OCTOPUS HAS EIGHT ARMS, BUT IF ONE IS LOST, A NEW ONE REPLACES IT.

A FLATWORM CAN BE CHOPPED INTO TINY PIECES, AND EACH ONE WILL GROW INTO A NEW FLATWORM.
FISHERMEN SOMETIMES PULL OFF THE EDIBLE CLAWS OF CRABS AND THROW THE REST BACK INTO THE WATER, WHERE THE CRAB GROWS A NEW PAIR.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

DANNY'S "TREASURE" CHEST HAD EVERYTHING BUT A TREASURE IN IT......
T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
WELL, BOYS, IT LOOKS AS IF WE'RE TAKEN!
NOTHING IN THE CHEST BUT NOTES WRITTEN BY OTHER SUCKERS LIKE US!
IMAGINE THAT OLD SWINDLER WORKING A RACKET LIKE THAT! HE SELLS "TREASURE" MAPS TO PEOPLE FOR $2,000!
AND LOOK AT ALL THE PEOPLE HE'S TAKEN IN BY IT! ALL THESE NOTES PROVE THAT PLENTY OF PEOPLE BIT ON IT!
CAN'T WE HAVE HIM ARRESTED?
I DON'T SEE HOW! THERE WAS A TREASURE CHEST DOWN THERE, ALL RIGHT, BUT HE DIDN'T GUARANTEE THERE WAS A TREASURE IN IT!
I BET HE'LL SELL MAPS TO OTHER PEOPLE AND THEY'LL GET STUNG LIKE WE DID!
THAT NOTE WE FOUND IN THE CHEST SUGGESTED THAT WE LEAVE A NOTE TOO! SHALL WE?
WHY NOT?
YOU WRITE A NOTE, NUTTY! I'LL PUT IT IN THE CHEST AND DUMP IT OVERBOARD!
I'LL WRITE ONE, ALL RIGHT..... AND HOW!
IF I CAN SPARE ANYONE THE TROUBLE WE WENT TO, I'LL BE SATISFIED!
LOOK AT WHAT HE'S WRITING, DANNY!
"TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: DON'T BOTHER OPENING THIS CHEST UNLESS YOU WANT TO BE TERRIBLY DISAPPOINTED!"

DICK TRACY
MORGUE
HIS NAME IS "CARTY" MACEFIL. HE SUSTAINED A FRACTURED SKULL AND A BROKEN NECK WHEN HE JUMPED FROM A CAR OF THAT SPEEDING FREIGHT TRAIN.
BUT THE FELLOWS IN THE TRUCK —WHAT HAPPENED TO THEM?
WELL, YOU SEE, THEY OPENED FIRE ON US WITH A TOMMY GUN.
I JUMPED FROM THE ROPE LADDER, DOWN INTO THE FREIGHT CAR. CHIEF WEEGEL LAID DOWN FLAT ON TOP OF THE BOX CAR. BOTH OF US RETURNED THEIR FIRE.
ALL WE KNOW IS THEIR TRUCK FINALLY TURNED DOWN A GRAVEL ROAD, BUMPED ALONG FOR A QUARTER OF A MILE, AND WAS ABANDONED.
SCENE: A FARM HOUSE IN THE HILL COUNTRY, ABOUT FIVE MILES FROM THE LOCATION OF THE RECENT GUN BATTLE.
BUT WE'RE ONLY POOR FARMERS, — DON'T SHOOT US.
I WON'T SHOOT YOU IF YOU DO AS I SAY. PICK THE RECEIVER OFF THAT TELEPHONE AND GET BUSY!
CALL YOUR FAMILY DOC — WHOEVER HE IS. TELL HIM YOUR BABY'S SICK. TELL HIM TO GET HERE RIGHT AWAY. QUICK!
I'LL MAKE THE KID CRY - SO THE DOC'LL THINK IT'S GOT A BAD STOMACH ACHE
DON'T YOU TOUCH A FINGER TO THAT CHILD—YOU—
WAH — AH-WA-A-A-A--
WE TRACED THE TRUCK NUMBER AND FOUND IT HAD BEEN RENTED FROM A TRUCKING COMPANY. THE ONLY EVIDENCE IT CONTAINED WAS A BUNCH OF THESE LAYING UP ON THE DRIVER'S SEAT.
YEAH? WHAT ARE THEY?
THEY'RE OFFICIAL METAL SEALS, USED TO SEAL BOX CARS. —THEY'VE BEEN STOLEN.
